SEC Forbids Short Selling While Stocks Are Falling

New Ruling to Prohibit Sale, Except at Higher Price Than Quoted.

Order to Become Effective on Feb. 8

Move Aimed to Make Manipulative Deals Unprofitable.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Seeking to prohibit short selling in a declining market, the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday promulgated, effective February 8, a new rule which forbids any short sale of securities "at or below the price at which the last sale thereof, regular way, was effected."

Under this rule, a short sale can be made only at a price above the last recorded quotation for a given stock. Thus, if the quoted price for a steel stock is 50, a short seller of that security must ask at least 50⅛ per share.

After the effective date of the rule, all selling orders must be marked "long" or "short" and members of stock exchanges are forbidden to lend or arrange for the loan of any securities for delivery for the purchaser after sale on an order marked "long," in absence of knowledge that the seller owns the security sold.

Odd-Lots Exempted.

Odd-lot transactions are exempted from the rule on the ground that it would be difficult to place short-selling restrictions on the odd-lot market and because any short selling occurring there would be unimportant.

The rule is designed, not to outlaw short selling, but to make manipulative short selling unprofitable and thus unattractive. The SEC experts believe the rule will discourage short sellers who come in and out of the market when it is in distress. The SEC in promulgating the rules "to curb certain harmful uses of the short sale" pointed out that "these rules, of course, cannot affect the underlying economic causes of market movement."

The SEC also made public the results of two studies it recently conducted into effect of short selling on an intensive security liquidation and price declines. In these studies it was found that 30 per cent of the sales of 20 representative stocks were short sales and that in three stocks usually considered market leaders—United States Steel, General Motors and Chrysler—33 per cent of stock exchange members' sales were for short accounts.

Activity Is Concentrated.

Even more illuminating was the fact that of members' short sales in the 20 stocks during the two weeks under study, 72.5 per cent occurred in these three stocks. Moreover, it was found that of the 4,551 member accounts studied, the short selling of these stocks was concentrated in only 11 individuals. The identities of these individuals were not revealed.

A more detailed report on the commission's short selling studies will be made public in another two weeks or so, it was announced.

Reiterating its definition of a short sale as "any sale of a security which the seller does not own or any sale which is consummated by the delivery of a security borrowed by, or for the account of, the seller," the commission promulgated the following rule:

"Rule X-10A-1. Short sales. (a). No person shall, for his own account or for the account of any other person, by the use of any

First Night Work Fails To Break Filibuster

Senators Ready to Talk on Against Lynch Bill Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

The first bitter dose of night sessions as a nostrum for anti-lynching filibuster was fed to Southern Senators yesterday in a heaping, 11-hour spoonful, but it failed to cure the patient.

Unruffled, his voice almost as strong, his attire as immaculate and his slick black hair as neatly combed as when he started speaking nearly six hours before, 37-year-old Claude Pepper, of Florida, held the floor until the end.

The Senate recessed at 10:10 p. m., and Pepper had been speaking since 4:15. Nonchalantly, he informed reporters that he "hadn't finished his speech and will try to get through sometime today."

Proud of his first night session entry, Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, floor manager of the anti-lynching bill opposition, grasped Pepper's hand, then looked into

Glass Plans Bill Dooming Bank Holding Firms

Virginian Works to Further Administration's Aims for First Time.

A bill to abolish bank holding companies will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, working in close harmony with the Administration on the first major issue in recent years.

The former Secretary of the Treasury, now chairman of the Senate banking sub-committee, said yesterday his measure will provide for the dissolution of bank holding companies after a period of years and will carry no new extension of branch banking privileges.

Senator Glass, following recent conferences with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., may introduce the Administration's own bill as soon as it is drafted. Groundwork for the measure is being laid by a sub-committee of the interdepartmental committee on banking legislation, of which Chairman Marriner Eccles, of the Federal Reserv Board, is chairman.

Further word that the Virginian is co-operating with the Administration on the bank holding company legislation came from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau at a Treasury press conference.

"From my own standpoint, it is a clean-cut question of whether holding companies should be per-

Transfer of Assets Of Fidelity Awaits Court Rule Today

Transfer of assets from old Fidelity Building and Loan Association to the newly-organized First Federal Savings and Loan Association awaited a court order today from Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue.

Justice O'Donoghue announced yesterday that his earlier order permitted filing objections to the transfer through January 24, and that no action could be taken until today.

At 4 o'clock yesterday the deadline for objections to the sale passed with none received. Today attorneys for interested groups will appear in District Court for necessary formalities.

London, Paris Oppose Hasty Shift at Geneva

London, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The British and French cabinets, meeting simultaneously tonight, decided upon a joint policy of opposition to any "hasty and dangerous reform" of the League of Nations when the League Coucil convenes in Geneva Wednesday.

Norris Moves To Permit TVA To Buy Rivals

Senator Blames Willkie for Killing Provision in Original Act.

By Sidney Olson.

With revelation of a plan to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority act to allow the TVA to buy outright entire private utility systems, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, stepped into the thick of bristling "peace" negotiations between the Government and the electric utilities yesterday.

The fact that Norris is considering this plan was regarded as of significance, since many business and industrial leaders have expressed the view that peace between the New Deal and the utilities would help curtail the business recession by allowing the utilities to spend several billion dollars a year for construction.

Thursday the President and Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee will explore at the White House a plan for purchase of private utilities in that State by TVA and a new State agency.

Norris, his entire attitude bespeaking determination to give no quarter in his long duel with the private utilities, recalled that such a provision had been included in proposed amendments to the TVA.

Under pressure from the utilities, he declared, the House struck out the provision, leaving TVA with authority only to purchase transmission lines. He added:

"And no man is more responsible for the killing of that provision than Wendell Willkie."

United Fight To End D. C. Crime Asked

Cummings Calls Capital Conditions National Disgrace.

Need for More Police to Stem Lawlessness Is Stressed.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Civic and official Washington was called upon yesterday to form a united front against the swelling tide of organized lawlessness after Attorney General Homer Cummings, speaking at the first in a series of open forums sponsored by the Washington Criminal Justice Association, described local crime conditions as a "national disgrace."

His appeal for co-ordinated mobilization was joined by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran. Judge Curran stressed four important elements to be considered in the District's crime problem—the public, the police, the prosecutors and the judiciary.

Ought to Be a Model City.

Citing conditions in the District as "confessedly deplorable," Attorney General Cummings—the first Cabinet member to attack local crime control—said that without co-operative public spirit, officials are half defeated in their struggle with increasing problems.

"Our resourcefulness as a city—and as a Nation—is at a very low level if we can't control major crimes and racketeering in an area of 70 square miles," the Attorney General told members of the Criminal Justice group.

"The District of Columbia," he continued, "should be a model for the country, clean and free from lawlessness. Instead, it stands forth conspicuously as a crime center."

After referring to Washington's crime situation as a "national disgrace," Cummings predicted his statement would serve to inflame the public and officials alike.

"But it is not an exaggerated statement," he said. "It is a calm, considered declaration of what is going on in our Capital City—the nerve center of the Nation."

More Police Needed.

"It is my belief," Cummings added, "that the men in key positions in the District are alive to these problems and are working valiantly toward their solution, but we need more policemen; we need more prosecutors; we need more judges—in fact, our list of needs is a long one."

A total of 9,034 major crime cases passed through Police Court last year, Judge Curran told the meeting. The problem of reducing this figure, he said, should interest every respectable, law-abiding citizen in the District.

"This is a serious situation," Judge Curran declared. "We must admit that there is no more sinister force in the United States than that of the 4,300,000 persons who are engaged by day and night in the commission of felonies."

Crime prevention methods, said the judge, should begin with the youngster in his home.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post and president of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, blamed Washington's increased crime record on an "uninformed and apathetic public." He urged strict penalties and rigid enforcement as a solution.

The Criminal Justice forums, being held in the Willard Hotel, are open to the public. Yesterday's meetings were the first in a series of eight. Two sessions a day—at

$1,000,000 For Chinese Relief Asked

Red Cross Answers Call of Roosevelt; Japan to Care for Own.

Appeal Made to U. S. Public for Fund to Aid Civilians.

Far East Developments.

President Roosevelt asked the Nation to contribute $1,000,000 through the Red Cross for relief of suffering civilians in war-torn China.

Japan carried her war against China to the south coast, sending fleets of bombing planes to wreck the Canton-Hankow Railroad, China's "life-line," and attempting to cut off rail communications with the British crown colony of Hongkong.—Page 5.

$1,000,000 Asked.

President Roosevelt last night asked the Nation to contribute $1,000,000 through the Red Cross for relief of suffering civilians in war-torn China.

The appeal by the Chief Executive for assistance to civilians of one nation involved in foreign war was believed unprecedented in American history.

Pointing out in a letter to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, that the Japanese Red Cross Society had declared in August it could deal with Japanese relief needs, Roosevelt urged that "all our citizens give promptly and generously" to relieve "our suffering fellow-beings" in China."

Further assistance to Chinese noncombatants has been promised by the Red Cross societies of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, Admiral Grayson said last night.

Drive Begins Immediately.

Meanwhile, in Washington Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Red Cross Chapter, announced last night that the local drive for funds will begin immediately.

The text of President Roosevelt's letter to Admiral Grayson follows:

"There is, I am confident, a widespread desire on the part of our citizens in every section of the country to contribute to a fund to aid in meeting the extreme distress of millions of civilian people in China. I feel that our people are deeply sympathetic with those in need in this situation and will wish by their voluntary contributions to take some larger part in aiding in this humanitarian task in which the people of many countries are participating.

"The need of the Chinese is evidenced by the fact that when the International Red Cross committee made inquiry of both the Japanese and Chinese Red Cross Societies the Japanese Society re-

Plane Bound Here, D. C. Men Aboard, Marooned in Sky

Lost in low-hung clouds, an Eastern Air Lines plan with two passengers and a crew of three was trying to find its way back to Newark early this morning four hours after it was due in Washington.

One of the passengers was C. C. Bane, of Bethesda, Md., proprietor of I. F. Miller & Sons, shoe firm at 1222 F street. The other was identified only as P. King, of Washington.

According to Eastern Air Lines officials here, the plane left Newark at 8:32 p. m. and was due here 80 minutes later at 9:52 p. m. Shortly after leaving Newark Fred Jones, pilot, found his directional radio beam so weak he was unable to determine his position.

New York State police were asked by teletype to listen for an airplane and notify Newark of its location. Radio chains carried messages to listeners with the same request.

Eastern Air Lines officials said Jones had fuel at 1:30 a. m. today to fly about four hours. Ceiling at Washington was 600 feet at that time, 750 feet at Newark and 1,000 feet at Camden, N. J.

Reports from New York State were that the plane had been heard somewhere over the Hudson near Newburgh, N. Y., headed north.

Floods Force 600 Families To Flee Homes

Illinois Child Drowned; Cold Snap Halts Threatening Rains.

(Pictures on Page 5.)

By the Associated Press.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 24—Floods forced more than 600 families from their homes in three States today. One life was lost.

Highway and railroad traffic was seriously impeded by rivers and creeks which swelled out of their channels in Northwest Illinois, Southern Wisconsin and Eastern Iowa.

More than 2 inches of rain fell over most of the area. However, the rain turned to snow and the streams began to recede. The weather outlook was for much lower temperatures and clear skies by morning.

Eddie Proctor, 6, was drowned when he tried to ford a normally dry run on his way to school at Amboy, Ill.

Rockford was the hardest hit city, with four areas under water. The Ouachita River rose 4 feet over its 26-foot flood stage in South Arkansas, threatening a wide area.

Duce's Son Rests In Africa on Hop To South America

Dakar, French West Africa, Jan. 24 (AP).—An Italian squadron led by 20-year-old Bruno Mussolini rested here tonight after a 2,800-mile hop from Rome—the first leg of a propaganda and experimental flight across the Atlantic to Rio de Janeiro.

The three fast trimotored Italian planes were brought down at Dakar airport just 10 hours and 50 minutes after taking off from Rome's Guidonia military airport.

The fliers were greeted by French officials and the Italian consul as they climbed from their planes.

Miami Mayor Is Indicted for Seeking Bribe

Two Commissioners Also Charged With Exacting $250,000 for Vote.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Jan. 24.—Mayor Robert R. Williams and two other city commissioners, John Du Bose and Dr. Ralph B. Ferguson, and a special rate expert, Thomas E. Grady, were indicted today on charges of soliciting a bribe from the Florida Power & Light Co.

A special grand jury investigating the new administration, which took office last May, also indicted Carl F. Lambert, a consulting engineer employed by the city, on a charge of exacting a $2,800 bribe from a concern which was to make a water waste survey.

The indictments charged the three commissioners and Grady last December 16 "did . . . unlawfully and corruptly demand and exact of and from one Bryan Hanks, president of the Florida Power & Light Co. . . . the sum of $250,000 as a gift, gratuity, remuneration and reward . . . not authorized by law."

The consideration was alleged to have been that the commissioners would vote to repeal a rate-fixing ordinance adopted in 1933 which the utility has been battling in the courts ever since and to adopt a new ordinance setting electric rates suitable to the company.

The commissioners and Grady posted bonds of $2,500 each for trial at the next term of circuit court.

Reds Bar Consuls To Conceal Naval Base, British Say

London (Tuesday), Jan. 25 (U.P.).—London morning newspapers today said Russia requested the withdrawal of foreign consuls from Leningrad so that the Baltic seaport might be secretly converted into a gigantic naval base.

The Daily Herald's diplomatic writer said "Leningrad, the second city in Soviet Russia, is being turned into a gigantic secret fortified naval dockyard, arsenal and base."

"The conversion of Leningrad into a naval center is the real reason for the decision to have no more foreign consulates there—a decision against which the British Ambassador has been protesting."

4-Point D. C. Municipal Plan Is Outlined to Board of Trade

Urging citizens of Washington to unite in a demand for "more responsible local government," Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, outlined to the Board of Trade last night a basic four-point program to help remedy "defects of our municipal services" which now "cry aloud for prompt action."

Root of Washington's pressing crime, disease, relief and education problems lies largely in the fact that the city "is governed as a bureau of the Federal Government instead of as a municipality responsive to the wishes and needs of its citizens," Meyer declared.

Sir Willmott Lewis, veteran Washington correspondent for the London Times, the other principal speaker at the meeting, said that "no dictator could exist for more than a very brief time unless he controlled the press."

Fate of the press, which poses "the central, if not the greatest, problem of modern democracy," lies "in an enormous degree in the hands of its readers," Sir Willmott stated.

The four "urgent changes," proposed by Meyer, "which no longer seem open to question" are:

"1. Washington's budget should no longer be controlled by the Federal Budget Bureau.

"2. In place of our makeshift city government, Washington should be granted a charter extending the control of the Board of Commissioners over all routine municipal functions. This, of course, should not interfere with the desirable au-

French Ship Duels Planes After Paris Warns Rebels

Torpedo Boat Fires on Encroaching Fliers; Bombs Fall Wide.

Border Fortified To Fight Raiders

Insurgents Claim Teruel Evacuated; Fight Rages in Strategic Hills.

By the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 24.—The government today warned Spanish insurgents that further bombings of French territory will bring armed retaliation.

Edouard Daladier, minister of co-ordinated defense, was instructed to hasten reinforcement of anti-aircraft defenses along the Pyrenees frontier.

The warning was delivered to Generalissimo Francisco Franco after the border prefecture report that, during yesterday's rebel air raid on the Spanish town of Puigcerda, 11 bombs fell on French soil.

At Saragozza the Nationalists asserted in a semi-official note that shipments of war materials across the French frontier to the Loyalists gave Franco a "legitimate right" to bomb railroads at the frontier.

Additional French army planes were ordered to the border with orders to go up and bring down any Spanish planes crossing the border. At the same time, anti-aircraft gunners were instructed to shoot down any foreign plane flying over the border.

French Boat Duels Planes.

[Coincident with the warning, the French torpedo boat La Poursuivante fired on three Spanish government warplanes flying over French territorial waters, the Associated Press reported.

[The surface craft opened fire on the planes as they flew to attack three insurgent warships steaming off the coast. Apparently mistaking the La Poursuivante for an insurgent vessel, the aircraft wheeled and bombed her. Neither the torpedo boat nor the planes were hit.—Editor's note.]

The situation was made more tense by reports from Marseilles tonight that the French destroyer Albatros had "rescued" the French freighter Prado from a rebel gunboat off Palamos and escorted it into Barcelona, Spanish loyalist provisional capital.

British Barely Escape.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—A Spanish loyalist communique asserted tonight that yesterday's insurgent air raid on the frontier town of Puigcerda was designed to wipe out a party of seven British Parliament members.

The Parliament group, including a former member of the admiralty general staff, had been in Spain on an inspection tour and had a narrow escape last week during an air raid on Valencia.

William Dobbie, who led the party, said after arriving in France that "the rebel planes have been chasing us throughout our travels in Spain."

All but one of the British M. P.'s were laborites and stanch sympathizers of the loyalist cause.

Teruel Evacuation Claimed.

Perpignan, France, at the Spanish Frontier, Jan. 24 (AP).—Teruel, center of a month-long battle, tonight was reported to have been evacuated completely by the government in the face of unceasing artillery fire.

The battle resolved itself into a fight for the surrounding heights, complete possession of which would bring automatic control of the city.

(Bitter fighting for one such height—El Muleton, southwest of the city—was led by American volunteer troops Saturday. Government dispatches said the Americans of the Washington and Lincoln Battalions

Court Self-Rule Urged to Senate By Cummings

'Nobody Oils' Machinery of Dockets Now, Ashurst Group Is Told.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday told the Senate Judiciary Committee Congress should "buttress the complete independence of the judiciary" by setting up an "administrative office" under the Supreme Court to control court budgets and expedite dockets.

Cummings said the Justice Department's present task of administering court finances and personnel routine is not only "disagreeable" to him, but is "a source of danger and a source of evil."

The Attorney General criticized the present "machinery" of court administration, and said it is a task that rightfully belongs to the courts themselves.

"Nobody Oils" Machinery.

"Nobody oils it," he said, "nobody greases it, nobody does anything about it. A competent administrator at least could try to devise some means of improving the machinery."

Cummings appeared in support of a bill introduced by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, carrying out recommendations made by the Attorney General in his annual report.

It would set up a director and an assistant director in charge of the administrative work of the United States courts, who would handle clerical, personnel and financial matters, keep in touch with the state of dockets and make recommendations to the Chief Justice on assignment of judges to serve temporarily outside their own circuits.

Nonchalantly fingering his horn-rimmed glasses, the Attorney General only once referred to the old court reorganization plan, but he constantly hammered at one of its objectives—overcoming delays in the law.

He said the proposed administrative change was a step in the "somewhat weary progress toward judicial reform."

"I don't suppose any organization exists that is so completely without any administrative system as the Federal judiciary," said Cummings, who added that dockets were so badly delayed in some cases that it was "pitiful."

"But what can I do about it?" he asked.

"You can recommend more judges," said Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah.

Fears Impertinence.

"But suppose that is not to blame for it," said Cummings. "Suppose the judges are ill. Suppose some judge is notoriously dilatory * * *

"I can't tell a judge his docket is notoriously behind and to hurry it up. He would think me impertinent."

Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, asked if there was anything in the Ashurst bill to give the new administrator power to tell a judge he "can't take a vacation."

"No," said Cummings. "But he could write a letter. I haven't the nerve to do that."

"Perhaps he would not have the nerve you have," said Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska.

"I think he would," said Cummings. "I'm more diplomatic than some people suppose."

Although Cummings several times mentioned delays in court procedure, at no time did he refer directly to age of justices as a contributing cause and it was Senator King who made the only direct reference to the old court bill.

King, opposing the proposed reform, told Cummings he had "come here last year asking for 50 new judges."

"I had no such intention," replied Cummings. "Let's keep the record straight."

"Anyway, you wanted to increase the size of the court," said King.

Norris Opposes Plan.

Senator Norris opposed transferring from the Justice Department to the proposed Supreme Court administrative agency what he called an "enormous power without any law limiting it." Norris said it would take all of the time of the chief justice to administer the proposed act.

Cummings said he "sympathized with some of your apprehensions, but I see no other place to put the authority."

The Attorney General said his department now is placed in the position of having to grant or deny judicial requests for personnel salary increases and traveling expenses when the judiciary itself was an independent arm of the Government and should administer its own affairs.

He said "concentration of responsibility" under the courts was needed.

"Then if business gets behind, they won't have someone else to blame for it," he added.

Senate Inquiry Into New Jersey's Appointee Would Set Dangerous Precedent.

By Franklyn Waltman

IT would be a rather amazing development if the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee succumbed to the pressure for an investigation into the past of John Milton, the newly appointed Senator from New Jersey, to determine his fitness to sit in that august body.

WALTMAN.

Not only would such procedure constitute a precedent, it would constitute a precedent which would greatly jeopardize representative government. For, barring the use of fraud or corruption in getting possession of a certificate of election or appointment to the Senate, New Jersey and every other State is entitled to whatever kind or type of representative in the Senate it desires.

Without holding here any brief for Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, another aspect of such an undertaking merits consideration. Important as the inquisitorial powers of the Senate are and as proper as it is to use them in matters of national scope and effect, the Senate should not permit itself to become a grand jury in purely local problems and situations.

What Mr. Milton has done in the past, what political affiliations or alliances he has had, is not the business of the Senate. It is the business of the people of New Jersey and if they are satisfied, under our form of representative government, it is not for the Senate to say them nay. It is the business of the Senate only to determine that Mr. Milton comes into its midst on a certificate which was not procured either by fraud or corruption—and that in this instance is not charged.

But it may be objected that, while such a rule is valid when applied to an elected candidate for the Senate, Mr. Milton was appointed and consequently the people of New Jersey have not had an opportunity to pass on his qualifications as their representative. That is true, but Mr. Milton was appointed by a Governor who was elected to his office only last November and is one of the idols of the people of New Jersey.

Thus, if the people of New Jersey have any quarrel with the Milton appointment they should hold that fact against Gov. Moore. Moreover, Mr. Milton is named only for the period intervening until an election is held next November and if he does not meet with popular approval, he can then be rejected.

Indeed, he can do little or no damage—if he were so minded—by being left in the Senate until next November, whereas the Senate by undertaking to reject him can establish a harmful precedent which in the years to come may return to plague it and representative government.

Underlying the present agitation for an investigation of Mr. Milton's past is an issue which goes far beyond the New Jersey Senator's personality or the activities of Mayor Hague. It is an issue which directly involves the right of every State to be represented in the Senate by a man of its own choosing.

Thus, if Mr. Milton, of New Jersey, may be turned out of the Senate because of some alleged unholy alliance with Mayor Hague, next year a Mr. Smith, of Michigan, may be refused a seat because he is in league with certain labor leaders that a majority of the Senate finds obnoxious, or a Mr. Jones, of Maryland, may be refused a seat because a majority of the Senate does not approve of his manners. It may be argued the last contention is ridiculous, but where is the line to be drawn?

Suppose for the moment a majority of the Senate had felt exceedingly strongly about the Ku Klux Klan in 1926 and that the State of Alabama elected to the Senate a Ku Klux Klansman, as it did. Can it be argued the Senate would be justified in rejecting that Alabaman? It cannot, for the simple reason that the people of Alabama are entitled to have a Klansman or any other type of man represent them in the Senate.

This column made that contention last August when a Klansman was named to the Supreme Court, with the additional contention that while a Klansman in the Senate was the business of Alabama, a Klansman on the Supreme Court was the business of the country and especially of the Senate. The latter body, much to the subsequent regret of some of its members, failed to be impressed then by our argument.

The movement to have Mr. Milton investigated to determine whether he should be rejected as a member of the Senate has its inspiration in the offices of a New Jersey newspaper and in certain labor ranks. There is reason to believe that those behind the movement are far more interested in getting an inquiry and having certain local New Jersey details revealed than in unseating Mr. Milton.

Perhaps these details should be revealed. Perhaps a fight on Mayor Hague and his Jersey City political ring is a laudable one and those carrying it on deserve praise for their public service. But such a fight should be conducted in New Jersey—not by the Senate in Washington.

In a representative democracy, the people themselves have responsibilities which they should assume. They are entitled to exactly the kind of government they want. If the people of New Jersey do not like the Milton appointment, if they are tired of Mayor Hague, they have the power to enforce their decisions—without the Senators of Wisconsin, Nebraska or some other place taking a hand in it. Anyway, the Senate is not a grand jury for investigating the merit of municipal government in Jersey City.

Farm Bill Conferees 'Pull the Teeth' of Controversial Dairy Provisions.

By the Associated Press.

CONFEREES WORKING out a compromise farm bill have "pulled the teeth" of the controversial "dairy amendments," Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, said yesterday.

Originally, the amendments would have denied Federal subsidies and loans to farmers who produced dairy, or livestock, products on land retired from cotton, corn, wheat, rice or tobacco.

Pope said these provisions have been rewritten so that farmers could produce a "normal or ordinary" amount of dairy products without loss of benefits.

Price-supporting loans for cotton, wheat and corn will be mandatory under the bill, Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said, when prices drop below fixed levels, provided farmers had approved marketing quotas.

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, predicted the bill would be ready for Congressional action shortly, and said "producers of all crops covered in the law will find it constructive and satisfactory."

Smith explained that a mandatory loan program would operate for cotton and wheat whenever prices dropped to "52 per cent of parity." Corn loans would start at 75 per cent of parity.

* * * *

Representative Doxey (Democrat, Mississippi), a conferee, said he favored "striking out the entire amendment" but that a majority of the group had agreed upon the milder compromise.

"This at least should make the farm program workable," Doxey said.

SENATOR MINTON (Democrat), of Indiana, plans a reception February 17 for Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner of the Philippines, his office said. McNutt's trip to Washington, originally scheduled to start January 28 by clipper plane, has been delayed to February 2 by inclement weather.

Minton's office said Gov. M. Clifford Townsend, the Indiana Congressional delegation and leading Democrats would be invited to attend the reception at a local hotel. Indiana Democrats said the reception, if all invitations were accepted, would bring together warring factions in the State party.

A "DELIBERATE, honest effort toward trying to make income balance outgo" would be the greatest contribution Congress could make to business recovery, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, told the House.

"Every time you take another nickel from the Treasury," he said, "you're putting another stumbling block in the paths of millions of unemployed who can't get jobs until business and industry are sure the Government will leave them alone."

Expanded Government activities are the "danger point," Woodrum said. He asserted Congress "can't cut expenditures on one hand as long as we go along on the other and create new agencies and new departments."

First-Day Mail Nets $381 for Paralysis Fight

Local Radio Topnotchers to Serve as Announcers at Ball Hotels.

Following an appeal by radio and newsreels last week-end to send dimes and dollars to the White House to help combat infantile paralysis, a barrage of mail containing $381 was received yesterday.

The dimes totaled $80. The money was turned over to Commissioner George E. Allen, executive chairman of the President's Birthday Celebration, who will send the contributions to Keith Morgan, national director of the national foundation in New York.

All radio topnotchers in the local territory have promised support at the Saturday night events, Andrew R. Kelley, chairman of the entertainment committee, announced.

Broadcasters to Serve.

Arthur Godfrey, radio commentator, will be in charge at the Mayflower Hotel, Larry Elliot, of Station WJSV, will handle the floor show at the Hamilton Hotel.

Gordon Hittenmark, of WRC, will be master of ceremonies at the Wardman Park Hotel. Arch McDonald, WJSV sports commentator, will be in charge at the Willard. Art Brown, WOL commentator, will be master of ceremonies at the show at the Raleigh, and Lee Everett, WMAL, will be in charge at the Hamilton. Tony Wakeman, WOL, sports commentator, will be the "floating" master of ceremonies at various hotels.

John Saul again is chairman of the floor committee for the celebration. He is assisted by Robert J. Cottrell and Maj. Horace B. Smith as executive vice chairman.

Snite Says "I Know the Need."

Miami Beach, Jan. 24 (AP).—"I know the need," Fred B. Snite, jr., told an international radio audience tonight as he made a 50-word appeal from his iron lung for support of the foundation for prevention of infantile paralysis.

Snite, who has lived in the metal respirator since he was stricken by the disease in China almost two years ago, spoke on a program designed to center interest on the President's Birthday balls Saturday.

"I am happy to speak to you this evening and, like President Roosevelt, I am asking you to join with him in helping the foundation to fight infantile paralysis—I know the need," said the brief script prepared for him to read.

Dupont Laundry Drivers Walk Out

Truck drivers of the Dupont Laundry Co. went on strike at the company's plant, 2535 Sherman avenue northwest, yesterday morning.

There was no disorder although a special detail of policemen were on duty in front of the building in case of violence.

J. M. Fisher, manager of the laundry, said other employes were replacing the striking drivers. The company was only given four days to sign a contract with the union, Fisher declared, which was insufficient, because the firm's president is in Florida.

Reds Protest to Estonia.

Admiral Pleads With Committee

This candid picture of Admiral R. R. Waesche, Coast Guard commandant, was made yesterday as he urged the House Merchant Marine Committee to approve Coast Guard training for merchant seamen. The proposal, he said, would cost about $720,000 annually.

Ships Manned By Tyros Held Source of Peril

Lack of Trained Sailors Is 'Unfair,' Coast Guard Admiral Says.

The Coast Guard considers it "unfair" for its men to risk their lives while it lacks authority to enforce strict observance of laws and regulations and thus prevent maritime disasters, Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the Treasury service, yesterday told the House Merchant Marine Committee.

Urging a system of training for merchant seamen under Coast Guard supervision, he said he believed the Maritime Commission would aprove a three-point program of basic training in merchant marine practice, additional training for seamen showing proficiency and aptitude and an "inspector-instructor plan under which the Coast Guard would place men on vessels to "co-operate" with shipmasters in observing saftey-at-sea regulations.

The training system proposal, in line with a recommendation made by the Maritime Commission last year, would cost $720,000 annually but would be "well worthwhile," Admiral Waesche said.

The 500 men to be enrolled initially in the training program, he added, probably could be enlisted primarily from the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department announced that 30 officers and 107 men of the Merchant Marine Naval Reserve will make a training cruise from New York to Guantanamo, Cuba, aboard the battleship New York next May. A similar cruise was made on the U. S. S. Wyoming last October, naval officials said.

The merchant marine school for training seamen, proposed by the Maritime Commission, would have a shore base on Hoffman and Swinburne islands in New York Harbor.

The commission urged that three months' training be given prospective seamen at the two islands, followed by six months on a training merchant vessel and then by three months on a cruising Coast Guard cutter.

It also recommended that training be given aboard a sailing vessel attached to the shore base.

Organized labor has been hostile to the plan on the ground that seamen trained by the Coast Guard would be "indoctrinated" against the labor movement.

Hamilton Lays Onus of Slump Upon New Deal

G. O. P. Chairman Blames Administration 'Failure' for Conditions.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, tonight charged President Roosevelt with five years of New Deal "failure," resulting in business "demoralization," increased taxation of the working class and no lessening of unemployment.

Hamilton asserted the "only reason grass doesn't grow in the streets of the Nation is because it is kept down by 13,000,000 unemployed tramping the streets looking for jobs in vain."

"If we don't return quickly to a safe-and-sane democratic form of Government, it will be too late for redemption," he said.

Refraining from predictions regarding the outcome of the off-year Congressional elections, he said he did not doubt that "there are many who look forward to the next campaign with some misgivings as to whether or not the voters can be rallied to the Republican standard.

"That thought is natural because it was bound to come after the overwhelming victory which Mr. Roosevelt won at the hands of our people in 1936. But I want to say to you that the campaign which we're about to enter presents an entirely different picture in many ways than that which confronted us in 1936."

He said that in that campaign "we were sustained by the knowledge that we truthfully charged that if the policies of the New Deal Administratoin were continued such policies would ultimately bring about social unrest, economic ruin and the destruction of the democratic form of government. . . . Now, 'the goblins have got us.'"

Four City Officials Indicted in Miami Graft Case

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A special grand jury indicted four Miami officials yesterday on charges of conspiracy and exacting remuneration not provided for by law. Commissioners John W. DuBose, Ralph Ferguson and Mayor R. R. Johnson 'Thundering Rooster' Of NRA Sick Chicken Society

Former Employes Choose Ex-Leader to High Post; 'Nine Old Capons' Rule; Schechter Decision Day to Be 'Sacred.'

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, offered the honorary presidency of the Sick Chicken Society of America and the title of "Great Thundering Rooster" which goes with it, responded yesterday with a terse "ok."

The tentative constitution of the society explains that membership is restricted to former employes of the NRA, that the society's purpose is to "provide an opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of alcoholic stimulant."

The still tentative constitution also "may be amended at any meeting at any time by any member with or without notice subject only to the approval of the "Nine Old Capons."

The "Nine Old Capons" have the last word, if they can get it, and they can "amend the constitution at any time by writing an opinion."

They will take a back seat on one day of the year, the Sacred Day, celebrating the anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision in the famous Schechter (sick chicken) case declaring the NRA codes unconstitutional. On that day, May 27, Gen. Johnson will be sole speaker. If he fails to show up, the society will observe two minutes of pandemonium.

Officers will be designated as Supreme Rooster, Nearly Supreme Rooster, Supreme Scratcher, Custodian of the Nest Egg. Chairman of the entertainment committee will be called the Supreme Chicken Chaser, and his assistants will be Game Cocks.

Temporary members of the governing body of Old Capons are E. M. Jeffery and John Dunning, of the I. C. C.; L. H. Peebles, SEC; Frank Healy, Procurement Division; T. T. Marye, Social Security Board; Daniel S. Ring, Maritime Commission; Frank A. Reilly, Alvin Brown and George W. Lindsay.

Lindsay is supervising admission of new members, at his office, 733 Southern Building. Lindsay said yesterday more than 160 persons had applied for membership.

Commission Will Study Modest Jefferson Shrine

Suggestions for a modest memorial to Thomas Jefferson in lieu of the marble palace on Tidal Basin will be discussed at a closed meeting of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission this afternoon.

Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the commission, who has been ill, is due in Washington for the meeting.

President Roosevelt is understood to have suggested the much less expensive memorial in a recent conference with House members.

Interior Aide to Attend Braille Unit Luncheon

Oscar Chapman, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, will attend a luncheon Thursday of the Braille Group of the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross at the American Association of University Women's Club, it was announced yesterday.

The group will include volunteers on the Braille committee of the District chapter. Otto Lund, manager of the District chapter, and Miss Catherine Grady, volunteer instructor in Braille, will also attend.

Miss Pinchot, 'Miracle' Star, Takes Own Life

William Gaston's Wife Dies of Car Fumes, Wearing Ermine Wrap.

By the United Press.

Old Brookville, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Rosamond Pinchot, tall, ash-blonde actress, who rose to fame as the nun in Max Reinhardt's play, "The Miracle," committed suicide today.

Her body was found in an automobile in the garage of her home. Windows of the car were stuffed with rags and a garden hose was attached to the exhaust to pipe carbon monoxide gas into the car.

Friends believed the 32-year-old actress, niece of former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, ended her life because of grief over estrangement from her husband, William Gaston.

Husband Well Knwon Here.

Gaston, son of a Boston millionaire, World War flier and a playwright, is well known in Washington, where he spent a year as a member of the mediation board of the oil industry. The former husband of Kay Francis, movie star, married Miss Pinchot in 1928. They were separated and reconciled several times. The last separation led to reports they would seek a divorce, but this was never confirmed.

Servants at the Long Island estate which Miss Pinchot rented from J. H. Alexandre said she had no engagements last night but had seemed "quite cheerful" when she retired. After the household was asleep Miss Pinchot apparently rose and left her room.

For her last act on earth she dressed herself in a white evening gown, with silver slippers and an expensive ermine cape, and without disturbing the household of the spacious estate, walked down to the garage.

Ida Hanninen, a maid, found her shortly after 7 o'clock, lying across the front seat of the closed automobile. Police said two notes were found, but their contents were not divulged.

Her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Minturn Pinchot, is now in Arizona, and her father, Amos Pinchot, is a New York attorney. They have been separated since her early childhood.

Miss Pinchot's rise to stardom was one of the most remarkable in the American theater. The tow-headed girl of 19, who described herself as an "ugly duckling," met Reinhardt aboard ship and, after watching her walk along the deck, the German designer offered her the part of the nun.

Miss Pinchot had no previous stage experience. But she was tall and athletic and Reinhardt wanted a woman who could walk 4 miles a day on the stage. The part was so exacting that it was possible to hold only one performance a day.

Became striking Beauty.

In the four years she played in "The Miracle," the tall, stately girl who played the role of the nun never missed a performance.

"I had no ambition for a stage career until I met Reinhardt," Miss Pinchot once said. "After that I had no other ambition."

Under Reinhardt's genius she became one of the most strikingly beautiful women of the stage and was associated with nearly all his later productions.

Her childhood had been lonely, spent in girls' schools or apart from her parents. She made few close friends among theatrical people. Shortly after "The Miracle" closed its run, she married Gaston, son of a former Governor of Massachusetts.

They had two sons, William, jr., 7, and James, 5. Gaston now is in Colorado.

Irked Convict Places Soap in 63 Pals' Hash

Governors Open Oil-Control Parley

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 24 (AP).—Representatives of eight States and the Federal Government at a Governors' conference here today launched conversations aimed at interstate action to control oil production.

Gov. E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma, sponsor of the meeting, told conferees at the opening session the annual rate of consumption was out of balance with the annual rate of discovery and warned that even a temporary shortage of oil in the United States would be "disastrous."

The need, he said, was for the oil States to balance supply and demand through a program of long-term planning.

Oehmann Warns Of Fake Solicitors

Building Inspector John W. Oehmann declared yesterday that no person has been authorized to use his name in connection with soliciting advertisements for a publication of the District building code.

Col. Oehmann yesterday was beseiged by telephone calls from District builders reporting that solicitors for "ads" in the publication were using his name.

'Unloaded' Gun Kills Girl.

Baltimore, Jan. 24 (AP).—Cecelia Libertine, 10, kept home from school by a cold, was killed today by a shotgun fired by her brother, Anthony, 12, who thought it was not loaded, said Police Chief John Souers, jr., of suburban Ferndale.

Green Reveals He Still Hopes For CIO Truce

A. F. L. Not Certain to Expel Suspended Unions, He Hints.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Jan. 24.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today indicated he president of the American Federation of Labor, today iindicated he still hopes for a truce with the Committee for Industrial Organization and that it is far from certain that the A. F. L. executive council, which opened its midwinter meeting today, will oust the C. I. O. unions.

"The council is not meeting in a belligerent frame of mind," he remarked in connection with the possibility that the United Mine Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and other groups whose charters are suspended might be expelled outright and their fields opened for organization by A. F. L. units.

David Dubinsky, president of the C. I. O.'s International Ladies Garment Workers Union, recently blamed other C. I. O. leaders for collapse of Washington peace negotiations. Of this, Green said:

"I still hope that since Dubinsky and others have taken a position in favor of peace, that ultimately those who stood in the way must yield."

Reno Held Mecca Of Confidence Men

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—William Power Maloney, assistant United States attorney, charged today in Federal Court that Reno, Nev., "under the domination of William J. Graham and James C. McKay, became a mecca for confidence men the country over."

Maloney made the statement in opening the Government's case against Graham and McKay and Boies Heed, Phoenix, Ariz.; Thomas W. Sloan, alias Thomas O'Dell, New Britain, Conn., and Allen Comer, Sioux City, Iowa, all charged with conspiracy and using the mails to defraud.

LUCILLE REEVES CURRIE, 19-year-old red-haired waitress of Fort Wayne, Ind., confessed three robberies, including her brother's restaurant, and gave all but 50 cents of her $90 loot to a married sweetheart, according to police. She was held on an armed robbery charge. Gale Richendollar, 32, father of two children, also was held.

D. C. Unit Weighs 'Low' Income Tax

A "very low" rate for the proposed District income tax and a suggested cut in the present business privilege tax will be discussed by the Nichols sub-committee of the House District Committee today.

Chairman Nichols said he could not predict what rates may be adopted in view of the estimated reduction in the District deficit. Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said he probably would have some "very low" rate to propose.

Sub-committee members discounted a report that the measure might be scrapped and the Commissioners be allowed to meet the deficit by raising realty and personal property tax rates.

District Woman, 35, Found Dead in N.Y.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Iloma Furedy, 35, of Washington, D. C., was found dead today facedown in the bathtub of her apartment in Brooklyn, her arms bound with silk stockings and two deep gashes in her left wrist. The tub was half full of water.

A bloody razor blade was found in the bedroom. Police surmised Mrs. Furedy tried to stop the flow of blood by binding her arm with the stocking.

Miss Irene Furedy, 21, her stepdaughter, told police Mrs. Furedy had come from Washington to consult a physician about a nervous ailment.

Edward S. Furedy, who is maitre d'hotel at Harvey's Restaurant, 1107 Connecticut avenue, was reported to have said he had takon his wife Sunday to New York to see a doctor. Mrs. Furedy was "very nervous," he declared.

He is said to have returned to Washington Sunday afternoon, and to have flown back to New York yesterday on news of his wife's death.

Heart Exposed a Week, 2-Year-Old Boy Dies

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—Two-year-old Geoffrey Knight, who lived for a week with his heart exposed, died tonight. The boy, son of a Dover miner, was suffering from pneumonia when brought to a hospital here. Physicians discovered that fluid pressing on his heart had enlarged it to three times its normal size.

A surgeon cut away two of the child's ribs and split the pericardium sac to permit drainage and daily washing.

Norris Moves To Permit TVA To Buy Rivals

TVA

recently proposed that the Federal Government buy outright the properties of his companies in the area affected by the TVA as a solution to "wasteful duplication."

David E. Lilienthal, a TVA director, said the TVA would not buy "water or write-ups in any dealings with utilities.

Some 40 or 50 Senators were asked by Chairman Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, to defeat the $2,300,000 initial appropriation for beginning construction of the Gilbertsville dam, for which TVA applied last week to the Senate Appropriations Committee. May's recommendation, embodied in a memorandum sent the Senators, was regarded as unusual. The appropriation has been approved by the Senate Committee in the independent offices bill.

The fight over results of TVA continued on the Senate floor, meanwhile, as Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, made a 40-page speech in reply to an address last week by Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

McKellar, in answer to a question put by Bridges, declared he would not oppose a Senatorial investigation of TVA unless Bridges were on the committee, but that he was "committed to the resolution offered by Senator Norris asking for a TVA investigation by the Federal Trade Commission.

Bridges had asserted TVA thus far had operated only to the "benefit and aggrandizement of a favored few corporations," instead of to benefit farmers and other small power consumers in the TVA area.

Defends Power Sales.

McKellar, defending TVA, asserted the reason TVA had sold secondary power to corporations lay in the situation whereby the private power companies had obtained many injunctions against the sale of power to surrounding municipalities.

Heatedly, the shock-haired Tennessean shouted, pausing occasionally to wipe the steam from his glasses:

"I have tried to find out what he (Bridges) really meant, and have come to the conclusion that he did not really know himself, but piecing it out as best I can, his idea seems to be that the TVA has done a dishonest and corrupt thing in selling surplus power which it had on its hands to five corporations.

"Well, surely the TVA act expressly authorizes the sale of this power to corporations and to individuals. It is true that the act gives a preference in the sale of power to States, counties, cities, cooperatives and farm organizations, and this preference has been given to the limit of the ability of the TVA.

"This disciple of Mr. Hoover's logic never says a word about the Authority being tied up by injunctions in the sale of power to cities and counties and others who are given preference, but he limits his argument to what a horrible policy the Authority has adopted in selling to industries."

He then quoted from a statement by Lilienthal on the sale of power to the Arkansas Power & Light Co., a sale attacked by Bridges as one of the "favored few."

Secrecy Is Denied.

Lilienthal reviewed the sale as a short-term contract made by TVA "rather than have the water go to waste and the Treasury deprived of the revenue." He wrote:

"The second reason for entering into the contract is that due to the efforts of 19 utility companies joined into a single court attack on the TVA and due to a cloud of litigation over a period of years, TVA has been unable to carry out arrangements with public agencies for the supply of power. While that vicious and groundless litigation is being disposed of it did not seem wise for us to permit the Federal Treasury to be deprived even temporarily of a total of $3,000,000 revenue during the five-year period of the contract."

Bridges had charged the contracts were secretly arrived at, but both McKellar and Lilienthal lashed back at this statement, asserting all negotiations and decisions were in the open, with complete notice in the press, including textual printing of the contracts.

Lilienthal also answered Bridges' charge that savings to consumers under the contract with the Arkansas company were merely a "pious hope," by reporting the company had agreed to a reduction in rates immediately upon entering into the contract, and had put in a rate reduction of $40,000 a year.

Willkie Contradicts Norris.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, asserted tonight that Senator Norris was "in error" in a statement that "Willkie had more to do than anyone else with the defeat in 1935 of the provision that the TVA be permitted to acquire public utility properties as systems."

Willkie declared that, to the contrary, in 1935, before the House Military Affairs Committee, he made this proposal:

"That before TVA duplicates the transmission and distribution systems of companies already in the business that it be required to condemn the property thus sought to be duplicated and pay the companies owning such properties the value of the same as determined by a just tribunal."

Washington Criminal Justice Association Opens D. C. Crime Control Forums

Post Staff Photos.

The first two of eight open forum discussions on the District crime control program were held yesterday. Shown above are Dr. James Allen Nolan (left), director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association; Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Eugene Meyer, president of the association, and Odell Smith, cochairman yesterday. One of the speakers was Judge Edward M. Curran, shown as he urged co-ordinated crime control efforts in the Capital.

Cummings Asks United Fight to End D.C. Crime

Crime

11:30 a. m. and 4:45 p. m.—will continue through Thursday.

Recalling his recent visit to the District Jail, Cummings condemned local prison facilities and said Washington should be first not only on its standards for this type of institution but in recreational facilities, police, health, housing, prosecution and courts.

Stressing the need for action among juvenile offenders as well as against hardened criminals, the Attorney General declared:

"The time has come for a complete renovation of the organic laws of the District of Columbia. At the present time, the relationship between the Federal and District governments is in a state of confusion."

Washington's Rating On Crime Lists Given

Attorney General Cummings, speaking before the Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday, placed the District high on the Nation's roll of crime.

Among cities of similar size, he said, the National Capital stands:

Tenth in the annual number of murders and nonnegligent manslaughters.

Eighth in aggravated assaults.

Seventh in automobile thefts.

Sixth in thefts under $50.

Third in thefts over $50.

Seventh in robberies.

Fifth in housebreakings.

Bishop James E. Freeman compared local crime conditions to a "civil war" and urged that a direct appeal be made to all churches to join the fight.

Unemployment, with the hungry and jobless clamoring for relief, was blamed by Frank R. Jelleff, member of the District Parole Board, for the bulk of Washington's crime.

From Emery B. Smith, colored attorney, came a pledge of support from "every intelligent and right-thinking Negro in the city."

Spencer Gordon, attorney, lauded the association for its efforts and urged appeals for co-operation be spread throughout the city.

The citizens of Washington, said Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, are not entirely to blame for present conditions. He suggested an augmented police force and renewed attempts to arouse public opinion.

Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the criminal justice group, outlined organization plans and told of what has been accomplished during the past year.

Meyer presided at the morning session and Curtis McCalip officiated at the afternoon meeting.

Sen. Hughes on 'Hill.'

By the Associated Press.

Senator Hughes (Democrat), Delaware, appeared on the Senate floor yesterday for the first time this session. He has been recuperating from an operation.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

SEC Rule Bans Short Sale of Securities During a Decline in the Stock Market

facilityly of any national securities exchange effect a short sale of any security at or below the price at which the last sale thereof, regular way, was effected on such exchange.

"(b). No member of a national securities exchange shall, by the use of any facility of such exchange, execute any sell order unless such order is marked either 'long' or 'short.'

"(c). No member of a national securities exchange shall mark a sell order 'long' unless (1) the security to be delivered after sale is carried in the account for which the sale is to be effected, or (2) such member is informed that the seller owns the security ordered to be sold and, as soon as is possible without undue inconvenience or expense, will deliver the security owned to the account for which the sale is to be effected.

Exemptions Specified.

"(d). The provisions of paragraph (a) hereof shall not apply to (1) any sale by any person, for an account in which he has an interest, if such person owns the security sold and intends to deliver such security as soon as is possible without undue inconvenience or expense; (2) any member in respect of a sale, for an account in which he has no interest, pursuant to an order to sell which is marked 'long;' (3) any sale of an odd-lot; (4) any sale by an odd-lot dealer to offset odd-lot orders of customers; or (5) any sale by an odd-lot dealer to liquidate a long position which is less than a round lot, provided such sale does not change the position of such odd-lot dealer by more than the unit of trading."

"Rule X-10A-2. Requirements for Covering Purchases. (a). No member of a national securities exchange shall lend, or arrange for the loan of, any security for delivery to the broker for the purchaser after sale, or shall fail to deliver a security on the date delivery is due, if such member knows or has reasonable grounds to believe that the sale was effected, or will be effected, pursuant to an order marked 'long,' unless such member knows, or has been informed by the seller, (1) that the security sold has been forwarded to the account for which the sale was effected; or (2) that the seller owns the security sold, that it is then impracticable to deliver to such account the security owned and that he will deliver such security to such account as soon as is possible without undue inconvenience or expense.

"(b). The provisions of this rule shall not apply to the lending of a security by a member through the medium of a loan to another member."

Two Periods Studied.

The commission's study into short selling covered the weeks of September 7 to 13 and of October 18 to 23 last year, described as the "periods characterized by a large volume of trading, erratic intermediate price movements and intensive liquidation." The study encompassed the examination of the positions and trade made in 20 representative stocks by all individual members of the New York Stock Exchange and their partners and firms—in all 4,551 accounts.

"Continuing studies of the commission, inaugurated in June, 1935," the SEC report explained, "have indicated that members trade predominantly with the price trend on balance. In the two weekly periods studied by the commission for these purposes, that evidence is clearly corroborated. More striking, however, is the revelation of the extent to which this selling by members in a declining market was short selling rather than the liquidation of long positions. In the 20 stocks covered by the commission's study, the member groups sold a total of over 920,000 shares. Thirty per cent of these sales were short sales. In three stocks usually considered market leaders—United States Steel, General Motors and Chrysler—33 per cent of the members' sales were for short account.

"A slightly different aspect of these figures illustrates more clearly the full effect of short selling in a declining market. During the period studied there was heavy liquidation of long stock by members, approximately 650,000 shares having been sold. In addition, the member groups sold short approximately 270,000 shares. Thus, heavy liquidation by the member groups in a declining market was increased some 42 per cent by short selling.

3 Firms Named.

"The influence upon the market as a whole of price movements in stocks generally regarded as market leaders is well known. The distinct tendency of members' short-selling to concentrate in the market leaders, bears out the familiar contention that short selling naturally seeks stocks enjoying a large volume of trading. Of members' short sales in the 20 stocks studied, 72.5 per cent occurred in only three stocks, United States Steel, General Motors and Chrysler. The 17 remaining stocks accounted for only 27.5 per cent of the short selling by the member groups in these 20 stocks, the smallest constituting only 7-100ths of one per cent of the total.

"Moreover, for the week of September 7-13, 1937, the member groups accounted for 40 per cent of all the short sales (both members and the public) in United States Steel, and for over 44 per cent if the short sales of specialists are added. Similarly in General Motors, members' short selling was almost 50 per cent of all the short selling and approximately 58 per cent if specialists are included.

"Not only was short selling during the periods concentrated in the market leaders, but short selling by stock exchange members, partners and firms was highly concentrated in the hands of a few individuals. Of the 4,551 member accounts studied, only 54 revealed short sales in United States Steel during the week September 7-13, when prices were declining rapidly. Furthermore, a total of 60 per cent of all the short selling done by this group of 54 was done by only 5 individual members. The short sales of these same 5 individual members constituted 24 per cent of all the short sales (exchange members and the public) in United States Steel during that week. A similar concentration is found in General Motors.

27 Individuals Involved.

"Only 27 individuals were responsible for all the short sales by member groups, and of these 27, 5 individual members accounted for 68 per cent of all the short sales by the member groups. The short sales of these 5 individuals constituted 34 per cent of all the short sales (exchange members and the public) in General Motors during that week. Again in Chrysler during the same week 23 stock exchange members and firms accounted for all the short selling by member groups, and out of these 23 only 5 individuals were responsible for the 63 per cent of the short selling. Among the 5 leading sellers in each of these three stocks, one floor trader was a leading short seller in all three stocks and two other floor traders were leading short sellers in two of the three stocks.

"Thus, the majority of members' short selling was concentrated in only 11 individuals. The figures for the period October 18-29 indicate a similar concentration of short selling even at the distinctly lower price levels prevailing in this later period.

"The preponderence of available evidence points to the conclusion that in a declining market certain types of short sales are seriously destructive of stability. An instance taken from one of the periods under study occurred on October 5, a day of severe decline. United States Steel opened at 76 on a volume of 5,900 shares, and then sold down in eighths and quarters until 200 shares were traded in at 75⅛ at about 11 o'clock.

"The market in the stock showed signs of leveling off at 75. The price of 75 apparently constituted a support level. Examination of specialists' books shows that there were orders to buy approximately 5,000 shares at that price. Practically all of the buying orders at that level were for the account of the general public; approximately 3,500 shares were on the specialist's book before the opening of the market.

"But at the price of 75, floor traders entered the market with sales of 3,200 shares, of which 2,700 shares were short sales. Public support of United States Steel at this level could not withstand this concerted assault, and the next price recorded was 74½, from which price it dropped steadily to about 72."

Brokers Comment.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Brokers here said today the new rules announced by the Securities and Exchange Commission were moderately stricter in some respects than those now in effect on the New York Stock Exchange.

The rule on the "big board" at present forbids selling stock short at a price less than the last previous sale.

Brokers said the new rule means that it would be very difficult to effect a short transaction in a steadily declining market but would make it easy to sell short when a stock is rising rapidly.

Reorganization Blocked.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission disapproved yesterday a plan of reorganization for the Genesee Valley Gas Co., using for the first time its power under the utility holding company act of 1935 to block a reorganization.

The commission criticized the plan for failing to merge gas utilities belonging to the Genesee Valley Co.

"A thoroughgoing plan of reorganization," the commission said, "one more nearly consonant with the declared objectives of the act, would have contained provisions for the merger of the applicant's New York State operating subsidiaries into a single operating unit. In this manner would concrete expression have been given to the operating realities which in fact now prevail."

1st Night Work Fails to Daunt Filibusterers

Lynch

against the anti-lynching bill will be his maiden Senate effort, and the veteran Senator William H. King, of Utah. King will be the first Westerner to take the floor against the bill since Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, championed the Southern fight.

Pepper's 5 hour and 55 minute continuous speech broke this session's long-distance speaking record hung up last week by Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana. Although Ellender held the floor for six days, his longest continuous speech was 5 hours and 15 minutes.

Yesterday's long grind from 11 a. m. to 10:10 p. m., marked the opening of a last desperate drive by Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley to crush the filibuster log-jam that has blocked action on all other legislation.

Southern leaders, determined the bill shall not come to a vote, predicted the drive would end in failure, and planned to move late in the week to lay anti-lynching aside and call up instead the independent offices appropriation bill, first of a long line of blockaded Administration measures.

Cloture Is Only Weapon.

"We have the strength to speak for 30 days or for six months, if they insist on making us do it," said Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina. "I have three more speeches I'd like to make myself, but I can deliver 30 if necessary."

One remaining weapon was left to the leadership if night sessions fail to cut off the continuous flow of Southern oratory—cloture—cutting off debate by a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

But to invoke cloture, Barkley needs the help of Senate Republicans. Senate Minority Leader McNary is an anti-lynching bill supporter, but he reiterated last night the minority would never vote for cloture. So only as a last resort will leaders bring out a cloture petition, and then primarily for the purpose of putting Senators on record.

Meantime, the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching measure may be temporarily displaced by the housing bill conference report, which has privileged status. But a conference report is debatable, and Southerners could seize on this as a new filibuster instrument.

Yesterday's all day and night session followed the regular weekly conference of the President with his leaders, when the Senate impasse, which has continued for nearly three weeks, is known to have been aired.

30 At Night Session.

Last night's session was attended by about 30 Senators. Only a scant half dozen have been listening to the day by day debate.

Pepper attacked the bill as a "tragic prostitution of the processes of government," contrary to constitutional principles and out of step with the New Deal.

Occasionally he paused to sip milk, then proceeded, arms flourishing. Senators on both sides of the issue provided breathing spells, by long and involved questioning.

"I am one of those," Pepper told the Senate, "who has solemnly resolved and convenanted that this bill shall not pass unless the Senate is prepared not only to destroy American institutions but also to rob us of the last citadel of free speech." He said Southern Senators were following "a patriotic, essential course."

Earlier, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, believered his first speech against the bill, after two quorum calls.

"The power to destroy every American State is there," the Georgian said. He said the Wagner-Van Nuys bill is "in violation of the simple and legal morals of the entire English-speaking race." He said if the Government has the power to punish individual citizens within States, it has the right to take over all State powers.

Friends Say Wagner Will Seek Re-election

Friends of Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, said last night he intends to run for the Senate again, despite suggestions by his colleague, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), and others that he become a candidate for Governor of New York.

Some of the suggestions were inspired by reports ambitions of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., might clash. Both have been regarded as possible gubernatorial nominees.

Clipper Tries Again.

Almeda, Calif., Jan. 24 (AP).—Delayed three days by adverse weather and a clogged fuel line, the China clipper departed for the Orient today with her original load of eight passengers and two new ones. The clipper turned back last Friday night when gasoline line trouble developed 600 miles out.

Glass Plans Bill Dooming Bank Holding Firms

Banks

mitted to control banks through stock ownership," said Morgenthau, "I have already given my own view that this is an unhealthy situation."

Senator Glass indicated he was inclined to favor a five year period for dissolution of the bank holding companies, but made it clear that this was not definite.

Experts assigned to the task of drafting the proposed limitation are said to be agreed on a time limit sufficiently far off to permit the holding companies now in existence to liquidate with a minimum of shock on the general financial structure.

There are some 60 holding companies at present, holding stock in about 560 banks with an estimated $6,500,000,000 in deposits.

A bill already has been introduced in the Senate by Senator William G. McAdoo (Democrat) of California, also a former Secretary of the Treasury, to require bank holding companies to liquidate bank stock holdings down to 10 per cent of the outstanding stock of each bank within three years.

But the McAdoo bill would permit National banks to establish branches throughout the Federal Reserve districts. Glass, although an advocate of branch banking, said it was not intended that his measure would include any branch banking feature.

This view was echoed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who said:

"I don't think branch banking is an issue for consideration in connection with this legislation."

Only last week, President Roosevelt told reporters his attack on holding companies in general was not aimed at branch banking.

Drastic Measure Introduced.

A more drastic measure than either the McAdoo bill or the proposed Glass measure has been introduced in the House by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas. It provides outright dissolution of bank holding companies within two years.

Secretary Morgenthau at yesterday's press conference said he was in "complete accord" with views of Senator Glass on abolition of bank holding companies. He said Federal banking officials will try to agree this week on the proposed legislation, but declined to discuss details of the measure.

The bill being drafted by Federal financial experts is expected to include provisions for regulation as well as ultimate dissolution of the bank holding groups.

Japan Attempts To Cut Canton, Hongkong Line

Railway to Hankow Is Bombed 9 Hours; U. S. to Reduce Forces.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Jan. 24.—Japan carried her war against China to the south coast today, sending fleets of bombing planes to wreck the Canton-Hankow Railroad, China's "life line," and attempting to cut off rail communications with the British Crown Colony of Hongkong.

For nearly 9 hours Japanese airplanes, working in relays, bombed stations along the Canton-Hankow Railway and then cut across and bombed the Canton-Kowloon line connecting Canton with Hongkong.

It was the most prolonged attack suffered thus far in the Canton area. More than 20 perosns were reported killed in the raids on Canton's suburbs.

U. S. to Reduce Forces.

United States authorities meanwhile were reported planning to reduce the American military forces in the Shanghai area by 50 per cent within a month. The U. S. transport Chaumont was scheduled to leave next month with the Sixth Regiment of U. S. Marines. Great Britain also is planning a reduction in man-power in that area.

At the same time Chinese sources reported Chinese guerrilla units had made a swift thrust from the Nanyang Lake region and recaptured Sunchihtien, between Yenchow and Ssining, in Shantung Province.

Chinese Take Wuhu Hills.

Other Chinese units smashed their way up mountain heights in the vicinity of Wuhu while the Chinese air force simultaneously raided the Wuhu airfield again, purportedly destroying eight Japanese planes.

More than 1,000 Japanese were reported by Chinese sources to have been killed in the Wuhu assault.

At Hankow Gov. Han Fu-chu, 47-year-old governor of Shantung Province, was executed today for retreating before the Japanese in disobedience to orders. His retreat southward through Shantung Province left the wealthy area almost entirely in Japanese hands with very little fighting.

Mikado Expresses Hope for Peace in New Year's Poem

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (AP).—Hopes for peaceful "world conditions" were expressed in verse by Emperor Hirohito in his contribution to the annual imperial new year poetry contest, published today. The theme was "Morning in a shrine garden," and the Emperor's poem was:

"Peaceful is morning in the shrine garden:
"World conditions, it is hoped, also will be peaceful."

wiped out two squadrons of insurgent Moorish cavalry.

(An official insurgent dispatch from Salamanca, however, said the American volunteer units were destroyed and a third international unit—the Walter Brigade—was "decimated.")

An insurgent communique said observers had reported no signs of life in Teruel since Gen. Miguel Aranda's troops drove down the Alhambra Valley, north of the city, making the provincial capital untenable.

Government troops, however, were still holding two strong positions to the northwest, making it impossible for the insurgents to enter the city.

Teruel Victory Feted Here.

Two hundred members of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy gathered in the Harrington Hotel to celebrate a "Teruel Victory Dinner," marking the capture of the bitterly contested city by government troops last month.

Citing the loyalist victory at Teruel, Dr. Don Fernando de los Rios, Spanish Ambassador, declared he felt no hesitation in predicting ultimate victory for the Barcelona government.

"Spain is united today as it has never been before" he declared, "and it knows it has friends the world over, who will help see us through to a loyalist victory."

Samuel Rodman, foreign correspondent for the London News-Chronicle, recently returned from an extensive tour of Spain, echoed the ambassador's sentiments.

Bailey Fears Pay Control by Politics

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, declared last night proposed Federal wages and hours legislation meant "political control" over the working man's pay envelope and hours of labor. He spoke over the radio.

"Labor may now bargain collectively," Bailey said. "The power has been upheld by the Supreme Court. . . .

"At least, why not try out this new power before recognizing the principle of Federal (or political) control of wages and hours?"

Detectives Obtain Clew To Ship Bomb Plotters

Seattle, Jan. 24 (AP).—Search for suspected "higher-up" in the attempt to dynamite the Japanes motorship Hiye Maru gained new impetus today.

Immigration Solicitor J. P. Boyd, jr., announced George Partridge, confessed participant in the attempt, charged three men "put him on the spot" when he sought to withdraw from the plot in Vancouver, B. C. Search for backers of the plot has been under way since Partridge was arrested last Thursday. Rolphe M. Forsyth was drowned the same day while pushing a dynamite bomb toward the Hiye Maru.

plied that their resources were adquate to deal with their situation and the Chinese stated that they very much needed outside assistance.

"In order to give effect to this desire to aid the people of China it is necessary that some organization be designated to supervise the collection and distribution of the funds and for such a task we naturally turn to the Red Cross.

"I should like to request, therefore, that the Red Cross take such steps as it may deem appropriate to afford the American people an opportunity to respond by their contributions to the need of our suffering fellowbeings and I trust that their response will result in a good-will offering of as much as perhaps $1,000,000. In response to such an appeal I urge that all our citizens give promptly and generously."

Relaying the President's appeal to 3,700 Red Cross chapters throughout the Nation, Admiral Grayson declared, "Time is of the greatest importance. We feel confident that our citizens will respond generously to the need of the suffering men, women and children of another land."

Envoy to Name Spenders.

Admiral Grayson announced that the fund will be expended in China under the supervision of an American advisory committee, appointed by the American Ambassador, and will be apportioned by the committee to reliable and effective agencies which already exist.

During the past six months the American Red Cross has furnished $181,000 to the American Ambassador for relief purposes, he said.

Pointing out that hardships faced by the Chinese people have greatly increased in recent weeks, Admiral Grayson reported that "whole cities of a half million people have been depopulated. Food must be provided; the winter is severe, we are told, and clothing and shelter are desperately needed."

Launching the campaign within the District, Gen. Keefer said, "The Red Cross has become an international symbol of mercy, and there is great need for our co-operation at this time. I am convinced that our appeal will meet with generous response, and that we who live in such a fortunate land will assist the suffering and homeless thousands in China."

Pershing Re-elected.

Gen. John J. Pershing was re-elected honorary chairman of the District of Columbia Chapter of the Red Cross at a meeting of the executive committee last night.

Others re-elected were Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman; Victor B. Deyber, first vice chairman; Mabel T. Boardman, second vice chairman; Howard Morgan, treasurer; George B. McClellan, counselor, and Mrs. Margaret Hood Robbins, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The committee also voted further to develop the home service and nutrition services and gave formal recognition to the increased activities of the organization during the past year, particularly the first aid, life saving, home hygiene and care of the sick units.

Fat Girl Laughs and Grows Slim

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks — and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat. Adv.

China Organizes 'Lost-and-Found' Office for Humans

Hankow, China (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—A "human lost-and-found department" has been established to help countless tens of thousands of refugees find been separated by the war with Japan.

The department was set up by the China Travel Service to co-ordinate the frantic efforts of the homeless, driven from Shanghai, Soochow, Hangchow, Wuhu, Nanking and other cities occupied by the Japanese army.

No payment or reward is asked if the lost humans are found by the firm. Thousands of Chinese have registered their names and addresses and the names and last-known addresses of their missing relatives. Long lines of distracted Chinese wait patiently, day and night, outside the branches of the agency throughout the country in the hope of news.

Shift Tax Burden To Those Able to Pay, Says Quezon

Manila, P. I., Jan. 24 (AP).—President Manuel Quezon in a message to the Philippine assembly today proposed sweeping tax reforms to lift the burden from the masses and place it on those "able to pay."

The president, advocating a sharp reduction in sales tax and an increase in income tax, warned legislators "to avoid strangling business and jeopardizing the economic future of the Philippines."

Quadruplets Born To Filipino Mother; They Live, She Dies

Manila, Jan. 24 (AP).—Dispatches from Cebu today said quadruplets were born in the general clinic there January 19 to Mrs. Cipriana Bangcay, 22, wife of a fisherman.

The mother died shortly after.

Physicians said the babies were normal and thriving except the fourth, which was born weak. The first child was born at 12:50 p. m. and the last at 4:20 p. m.

1,200 Students Get Diplomas Here This Week

2,000 Junior High Pupils to Receive Certificates of Promotion.

More than 3,200 junior and senior high school students will receive diplomas or promotion in mid-year graduation exercises planned in the District's public schools this week.

Members of the Board of Education and other school officers will appear at exercises Thursday and Friday. Approximately 1,200 high school seniors will receive diplomas in these commencements, and 2,000 junior high pupils will be awarded certificates promoting them to senior high.

Graduation exercises in the senior high schools for white students will take place as follows, the superintendent's office announced yesterday:

Thursday: Eastern, 8 p. m., with Robert A. Maurer, board member, presiding, and Roosevelt, 8 p. m., Henry I. Quinn, board member, presiding.

Friday: Western, 1:30 p. m., Gratz E. Dunkum, board member, presiding; Woodrow Wilson, 2:30 p. m., Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, board member, presiding; McKinley, 8 p. m., Charles D. Drayton, board member, presiding, and Central, 8 p. m., Dr. Harvey A. Smith, former principal and now assistant superintendent of schools, presiding.

In junior highs for white pupils exercises are scheduled as follows:

Thursday: Anacostia, 2 p. m., Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent, presiding; Eliot, 2 p. m., Miss Jessie LaSalle, director of research, presiding; Gordon, 2 p. m., Dr. Smith presiding; Macfarland, 2 p. m., Mrs Smith presiding; Langley, 8 p. m., Dunkum presiding, and Taft, 8 p. m., Drayton presiding.

Friday: Deal, 2 p. m., Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent, presiding; Paul, 2 p. m., Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent, presiding; Powell, 2 p. m., Miss LaSalle presiding; Stuart, 2 p. m., Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, presiding; Hine, 8 p. m., Maurer presiding; Jefferson, 8 p. m., Ralph W. Strawbridge presiding, and Lenox Vocational, 8 p. m., Quinn presiding.

Brazil Wipes Out 'Horse-God' Sect In Forest Battle

Recife, Brazil, Jan. 24 (AP).—Pernambuco state officials tonight disclosed 140 members of a rebellious religious sect, worshipers of the Horse-God Trancelin, had been killed in a backwoods battle with Brazilian police.

Five policemen were killed and ten wounded in the fighting which occurred in a remote section of Bahia State.

The sect is headed by Jose Lourenco, prophet of the now-dead Horse-God.

A punitive expedition was sent against the strange religious cult last autumn when political leaders began to fear the growing power of Lourenco and his equine god.

Britons Flee Town As Dam Trembles

Ebbw Vale, Monmouth, England, Jan. 24 (AP).—Calm was restored tonight in the town of Beaufort, from inhabitants had fled when wardens warned them a dam holding back 200,000,000 cubic feet of water might burst.

Frantically working gangs, directed by engineers brought from London, succeeded in relieving most of the strain on the dam by partly emptying the reservoir it formed.

Many of the townspeople returned. Two thousand coal miners, who had refused to go into the pits, today planned to resume work tomorrow.

Hotel Official Says Fixed Pay May Cost Jobs

Waitresses' Tips Should Be Included in Decision, Hearing Is Told.

Waitresses will be in danger of losing their jobs if the minimum wage board orders "anything above a modest weekly scale," Willard M. Kochenderfer, executive secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington, told the conference yesterday.

"I am appearing here at this conference as an individual rather than a member of my organization," Kochenderfer stated. "I feel that employers will make other plans with regard to women employes should the conference approve a scale which is too high."

Kochenderfer pointed out to the conference that he has not missed a single meeting since the hearing began more than a month ago.

"From time to time I have heard testimony by employes, employers and experts, and I must differ with their testimony," he said.

First, Kochenderfer exhibited a menu which a prominent Washington hotel offers its employes. It included eggs, any style; cereal, hot or cold and with cream; stewed prunes and coffee, tea or milk.

"This breakfast is offered to all waitresses at this hotel," he dedeclared, "and this does not mean that the waitress can't order any other food she wants."

Several meetings ago, several waitresses testified that their food was different from that served to guests, and in some cases the food was not "fit to eat."

Secondly, Kochenderfer urged that tips be included in reckoning the minimum scale.

"Here again, we have heard testimony from waitresses who know their jobs will be endangered if the tips are not included," he said.

He took issue with the testimony of Dr. Elizabeth May, associate professor of economics at Goucher College, who testified recently that the minimum wage of California and Ohio did not include tips in the consideration of the legal wage for women.

"California positively takes into consideration tips in the consideration of the minimum wage," he declared.

Ohio also took into consideration tips, he said.

The Gross And The Net.

The New York Sun has made a contribution to constructive thinking in publishing a list of those who received salaries of $50,000 a year and over during the tax year 1936. The contribution lies in adding to this list the approximate Federal and State income tax paid in each case, thus calling the net as well as the gross figures to public attention.

The difference between the two is, in many cases, striking. Thus Alfred P. Sloan, jr., who heads the list, is credited with a salary of $561,311. But after deducting the minimum income taxes which must have been paid in this case, the net dwindles to $165,342. The list as a whole shows $20,400,000 taken in taxation out of salaries with a face value of $49,600,000. As made public by the Ways and Means Committee, these deductions are not mentioned.

Another point remains for consideration. Many of those listed, like Mr. Sloan, obviously have large outside income. Otherwise he could not recently have given away $10,000,000, out of an annual net salary of $165,000, to found an economic research foundation. The same applies to the late Mr. George F. Baker, president of the First National Bank of New York who, out of a gross salary of $50,900 a year, could not have left for philanthropic purposes a fund of some $15,000,000. Additional tax deductions involved in outside income would, of course, tend to lower the net salary retainable still further.

Of interest is the fact that the highest incomes in the list have to do with the active and progressive and more recently developed activities. The first six places are divided between three General Motors executives and three movie stars, not generally advertised as economic royalists. The automobile industry and the motion picture industry meet with huge popular support because of the huge popular interest in the products of those industries. And the huge gross salaries are a result of the popular demand. On the other hand, close observers will notice that the highest-salaried railroad president comes a long way down the list.

Perhaps these high earnings have some relation to "production for use," after all. And if the idea of the publicity is to point the finger of scorn at the recipients of large salaries, it is not likely to succeed. Gary Cooper and Ronald Colman were, respectively, third and fourth on the list, because many people evidently like to see them on the screen. When that is no longer true, and the same applies to the industrial salaries, those figures will shrink, the high proportion taken by taxation along with the net remaining to the individual.

Educated, But Unemployed.

Enrollments for higher education have doubled and trebled in almost every part of the civilized world since the war. New demands for industrial and government experts are one reason given; the new freedom of women is another. But, however reasonable the causes, the effects are everywhere disturbing.

The learned professions are fast reaching a saturation point. In Tokyo, recently, it was reported that a high ranking member of a newly graduated class could find employment only directing traffic. The case is not typical, but his disillusionment after years of study and probably sacrifice may be found in varying degree among youths the world over. Indeed, Hitler's rise to power in Germany is known to have been aided by his appeals to young "intellectuals" desperate for jobs. In this country, the demoralization is less acute; that it exists, however, will be testified by many college graduates now working as clerks or mechanics, or not at all.

It is to their plight that President Conant of Harvard has addressed himself in a report to the university's board of overseers. Though admitting a lack of precise information, he joins other observers in sensing a growing problem of unemployment among college graduates. He concludes from Europe's experiences that the only remedy is to limit university enrollments more strictly. He would "substitute men of greater ability for those who stand in the bottom quarter of the class." He points out, however, that this will entail larger scholarship endowments to make the professions accessible to men of all classes. Otherwise, the law, for example, might tend to become an exclusive field for sons of lawyers, to the consequent impairment of the profession.

These words from so eminent an educational leader will give pause to many who have regarded a diploma as a passport to economic security. As Dr. Conant foresees, they will probably be sadly disappointed. At the same time the current tendency creates a problem for others who look on a college career as the requisite of a gentleman.

For this considerable group there would seem to be only one alternative if university entrance requirements are tightened. The entire educational system will have to be speeded up so that the polish of classical study can be obtained in the secondary schools. Many, indeed, would welcome this innovation. The thought is growing that American youth is unduly coddled in respect to education and that Europe's secondary schools have much to recommend them insofar as they produce younger but mentally more mature graduates than even junior colleges in this country.

Mr. Cummings Strikes At Crime

Attorney General Cummings' biting comments on Washington's crime record will doubtless become an important milestone in this community's drive for more effective law enforcement. Since he is the highest legal authority of the Government, his demand for a new deal in handling this grave local problem doubtless carries the full weight of Administration support. That should mean corrective action without further delay.

It is quite obvious from his speech before the Criminal Justice Association that Mr. Cummings is thoroughly ashamed of Washington's crime record. Indeed, he regards it as a "national disgrace." As the only city under control of the Federal Government, Washington ought to be a model in law enforcement and other municipal service. "Instead," the Attorney General declared, "it stands forth conspicuously as a crime center."

The weight of that indictment falls upon Congress even more directly than upon the local community. Mr. Cummings properly emphasized the importance of stirring public opinion "to demand that criminal activities be stamped out." But the public, fortunately, is already aroused. Its demand for more effective law enforcement has been made vocal through the Criminal Justice Association before which the Attorney General spoke. The effective work of this agency in analyzing local crime problems and making the public influence felt is one of the most hopeful aspects of the present fight against lawlessness.

Without the co-operation of Congress, however, all the public opinion that can be mustered in the District would be of little avail. Mr. Cummings fully recognizes that fact. His appeal for more policemen, more prosecutors, more judges, a modern juvenile court, a decent jail, an efficient penal system, more adequate recreation, health and housing programs was aimed directly at the National Legislature which serves as a city council for the District.

It is impossible to escape the implication in this plea that the Capital City has been grossly neglected. That attitude is the more important because it is revealed at a moment when the Senate is engaged in a fight over the imposition of Federal penalities on local communities failing to enforce their anti-lynching laws. Some of these communities have much better crime records than the District. Instead of thus trying to undermine the responsibility of local governments not under its control, Congress ought to be extending the authority of the District to grapple with this disgraceful situation in its own front yard.

"The time has arrived," said Mr. Cummings, "for a complete renovation of the organic laws relating to the District. At the present time the relationship between the Federal Government and the District is in a state of confusion."

Presumably, then, the Administration will support current efforts to secure a real municipal government for the District. From the long-range viewpoint that seems to be the most significant aspect of the Attorney General's demand for more responsible government in the Capital City.

Protesting Too Much.

No exception could be taken to Mussolini's journalistic mouthpiece, Il Popola d'Italia, which recently sought to prove that the military qualities of the Blackshirts "are of the highest order," were it not for the way in which that newspaper goes about trying to prove the case.

Caesar came from the sunny peninsula and Napoleon was of Italian origin. Moreover, if Italy's military record includes a Caporetto it also counts a Vittorio Veneto. Military valor is not the peculiar characteristic of any one nation or people. It is the common attribute of all. Even the most peaceful nations, when they have reasons for fighting, do so with great courage. This fact the Japanese have learned in China during the past six months.

However, to prove that the Italians are very good soldiers Il Popola d'Italia now cites the capture of Santander, Spain, last summer. That, it boasts, was brought about by Italian troops. But since Santander was defended by a small force of isolated and ill-equipped Spaniards, the victory seemed nothing to boast about then; still less so now.

The fact that it is currently dusted off as an outstanding Italian accomplishment is interesting to those with reasoning qualities. They are not likely to be vastly impressed by a local skirmish which seems to have had no important consequences. They will be more likely to wonder why it is desirable at this moment to rake up this past episode of the Spanish civil war as the triumph of a nation ostensibly committed to non-intervention in that struggle.

The Future Of Broadcasting.

Numerous problems in the field of radio broadcasting remain to be solved. But if they are approached with the judicious and scientific temperament reflected in the current report of the engineering department of the Federal Communications Commission, there is every reason to believe that the present regulatory system will prove equal to the task.

A detailed inquiry by the commission's staff gave special attention to criticism of present radio service. The report, signed by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, is a detailed analysis of these complaints in the light of both technical and social problems. Educators made some telling points as to the neglect of instructive and cultural programs. But Mr. Craven found no substantial evidence that educational groups in general are as yet ready to render a comprehensive service of this type "with adequate facilities to sustain continued public interest."

Apparently the development of continuously successful educational programs will necessitate a much more active interest on the part of educators themselves. Use of ultra high frequency bands for educational broadcasting is urged when institutions and groups are prepared to go forward with a service of this sort. In addition, the department believes that commercial programs can be greatly improved by placing new emphasis upon the social responsibility of broadcasters.

Unqualified indorsement is given to the principles underlying the American broadcasting system. Competition between stations and commercial enterprises sponsoring programs has given the radio greater popularity in the United States than in any other country. For the most part, also, a liberal policy in the discussion of public issues is maintained. So long as this is true, there will be no substantial demand for government operation of broadcasting facilities.

In order to preserve uncensored private broadcasting, however, the experts believe "it may be necessary to establish standards of public service and to take such steps as are necessary to insure their being complied with. It may even be necessary," the report continues, "to provide for the rendering of specific services." Here certainly is one of the most important future tasks of the FCC. It must be more and more concerned with the type of program that is rendered and with the degree to which commercial broadcasting is devoted to the public interest.

To work out a plan under which radio programs can be steadily improved without resort to censorship, and with due regard to the economic independence of the broadcasting business, will not be an easy task. But, undertaken with a keen awareness of the social responsibility involved, that approach seems to hold the greatest promise of shaping radio's growth to the needs of modern democracy.

No Rights Reserved.

Our literary editor swears he knows a man who hasn't written a book; nice fellow, too, he says. Despite the risk of robbing a colleague of such a find, we cannot resist the temptation of suggesting a theme for aspiring Kiplings to cut their teeth on.

It is contained in a dull annual report submitted to the Colonial Office in London by the British resident stationed in Brunei, part of Borneo. Brunei is next door to Sarawak which the remarkable Brooke family rules. Magellan's ships touched there, but by 1521 the sultanate had already entered its decline and little was to be seen of its once magnificent imperial buildings.

In any event, the bones of four persons were found last year in Brunei completely inclosed inside a living tree. Examination revealed that a 6-foot panel had been removed from the trunk and a cavity hollowed out. Into this went the four bodies and, the panel having been replaced, soon grafting processes had sealed over the weird tomb. It might never have been discovered except that a storm blew the tree across a road.

We even offer a lead: "Speaking of druids, I am reminded of the tales one hears in the Malay about ape-men who are born, bred and buried in trees . . ."

Quack Cure For Parking Ills.

From the New Yorker.

We haven't a great deal of confidence in the new plan to relieve traffic congestion by forbidding parking in certain blocks.

The trouble is that, considered sheerly as an obstruction, the motorist looking for a place to park is much worse than the man parked where he shouldn't be. The second is at least stationary; the first is in motion, and he is possessed by a hundred devils of anxiety and desperation.

He drives slowly but eccentrically, searching both curbs for an opening that seems likely to fit his car. When he sees one, he stops abruptly, to the confusion of other traffic, and starts to back in. Usually, by the time this is half accomplished, it turns out either that he has misjudged the size of the vacancy or that parking in it is forbidden, and he has to pull out and begin all over again. Even if the space is legal and large enough, his nerves have been so unstrung by the angry tumult behind him that he botches the job hopelessly, either crumpling up his fenders or else locking his bumpers.

Ladies, under these hellish circumstances, have been known simply to let go of the wheel and scream. Four people hysterically trying to park in a single block can tie it up beyond a policeman's blackest nightmare.

It is obvious that drivers are going to park somewhere, or try to, and to free one street only to produce double bedlam in another seems to us dubious logic.

Ever-Normal Movie Prices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At peril of being mistaken for a New Dealer, I offer a sermon that affects ever-normal talkie admissions and the forgotten man.

My plea is for Congress to reduce taxes to neighborhood movie palaces whose admission charge is 25 cents or less per adult. To them I say:

My friends, you hiked prices prematurely on the happy-days-here-again theory, inspired no doubt by gentlemen royalists from headquarters who have overlooked most of their bets. Of course, you didn't foresee the Roosevelt depression, exclusive to these shores. Now you travel in the unenviable company of the traction lines in being the only institutions to boost the price of pasteboards, while hogs, beef, hen, fruit, raiment, etc., were taking a dive. Your former customers are like the guys who read the synopsis and pass up the exertion of reading the novel. They soak up the reviews and transfer the salvaged nickels to the saving account, and say, shush, we're getting used to not going to the squawkies regular.

Cut your fares 5 cents or 16 per cent and watch your attendance boom at least 25 per cent. John Dupe won't mind that extra nickel, you said! Well, brethren, that knife cuts both ways; you won't mind giving it up, if in so doing you boost your revenue, put your joy palaces back in the black. If you doubt the above figures, try it on your cash register and watch results. John Dupe will once more become John Dough in your calculations.

To A Native Son.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of January 18 a returning native son complains of the filthy and unhealthy condition of his native town. He appeared very sad to see the Capital of our great country so carelessly looked after. And for a pattern of imitation for cleanliness he puts forth Geneva, Paris, and London, and no doubt his mind roamed to other European boiling pots.

Would it not be glorious if all our native sons would make up their mind to come home, and not only complain of the unhealthy condition but get themselves a broom and assist the Nation in a clean sweep of the most beautiful Capital on earth. Our Secretary of State would no doubt then be greatly relieved of sending harsh notes and complaints to neighboring nations.

There was an old man once found sweeping the streets of Leningrad who had been a grand duke; if he had been doing the sweeping while that city was St. Petersburg, he might have been a grand duke yet.

Relation Of Crime To Destitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been quite a deal of discussion in the press during the last 10 days on two subjects which are very much related to each other. Unfortunately, the discussions have been kept apart, and I would like very much to make clear the close relationship between these two questions. I refer (a) to the much-discussed crime wave in Washington, D. C., and (b) the decision of the Bureau of the Budget, approved by Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the District Appropriations Committee, to cut relief to $900,000 for the coming fiscal year.

The public assistance division requested, as a minimum, $3,247,750. This amount was cut by our non-elected Commissioners, and further cut by the very much removed Bureau of the Budget to $900,000.

It is difficult for us to see how any responsible body of public officials, or elected representatives, can propose a budget which means that relief would be deprived of assistance. Nor can we accept the continued reluctance on the part of this body to recommend funds to take care of approximately 3,000 families in need of relief and containing employable persons.

The fact that the Federal Government has undertaken the responsibility to provide relief for employables, and has fallen down in this responsibity for Washington, D. C., does not reduce one iota the responsibility of this community to step in and take care of its own needy where the Federal Government has failed. Conservative estimates place the need at 3,000 families containing employable persons and in need of relief. However, nobody in this community, or anywhere else, actually knows how many more persons need public assistance of some form or other and are being denied that assistance at present.

In my opinion, this $3,247,750 is a minimum, and not one cent less than that amount should be recommended to the Congress. According to the press, the chairman of the District sub-committee on appropriations has opposed any reinstatement of the amounts which were cut off by the Bureau of the Budget. It is hard for anyone who has been in touch with the poverty as it exists in this community to comprehend so callous an attitude. That committee should know that we are in the midst of an economic recession which calls for not a cut in appropriations to the unemployed, but, on the contrary, an increase. Certainly, by this time, that committee must have noticed that Washington ranks second among the States in percentage of persons who are unemployed, able to work and seeking work. A committee with a vital concern for the unemployed in this community would, upon the publication of such data, immediately revise upward all their estimates for unemployment, relief and public assistance of every sort.

There has been a lot of public discussion in connection with a measure now pending before the Senate on the question of crime in Washington, D. C. It is in my opinion that the responsibility for the jump in the crime rate, which has been so adequately demonstrated, is occasioned primarily by the relief policy existing in this community. I ask what a person with no source of revenue, no relief of any sort, a family to support, should do under circumstances which prevail in this community? What did the 3,000 employables do during the last year? What shall the 6,000 unemployables do during the coming year?

One cannot condone, let alone recommend, crime as an answer to these questions. However, one can point to a public policy which makes it possible for so many fellow human beings to seek an answer to their personal problem in an anti-social form, namely, crime. The main answer to the problem of crime, generally, is to create those social conditions, such as improved economic standards, better housing, etc., which will make crime less possible.

Several well known Washingtonians are now shouting for an addition of 200 men to our police force. Instead of providing for more police, we should provide a more adequate relief policy which will make even fewer police necessary rather than increasing the force.

If some worthy gentlemen are looking for increased activities for police, I would suggest that the police be charged with the responsibility of checking on the enforcement of the 48-hour law for women which is at present without any law enforcement machinery that means anything, and the minimum wage law for women which requires a large enforcement machinery. This would constitute good social contribution to our community on the part of the police.

The Case Of Twaddle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "plan" to loan up to 90 per cent on new homes to stimulate building is the full-blown bunk. It's full of the same old idea we ought to be getting away from—more handouts. It fails to protect the people supposed to be benefited, against their worst enemies—themselves.

The plan contains the stimulative elements of the last building boom, I will admit—all the worst points in their worst form.

Take my friend, "Tom Twaddle." Had $20,000 in 1920, amassed by hard work. Went into building. Put up $250,000 worth of houses. Oh, yes, his neighbors in that queer, perverse way they have still refer to him as the quarter-millionaire.

Five years ago a pair of shoe strings was beyond his financial reach. So tight he couldn't make a small curtail on his personal hut. Became an involuntary landlord and suffered numerous losses.

He's in shape again now. No, Roosevelt magic didn't do it. Curtailed income gradually caught up with debts, 'sall—a process Jefferson, and all his democracy couldn't hasten. Letting an insurance policy go at cash surrender to protect a Government policy, Twaddle with the residue took a blind stab at 50 shares Chrysler at 11. He got clear at 122, just before the Roosevelt depression.

Now Twaddle's all set to go; his case is important only because his case can be multiplied. But build at present fancy prices, and wage scales jacked up several bucks beyond reason? Well, Twaddle just got over one headache. Ask for another? A sucker once doesn't mean a sucker always. Such is Twaddle's philosophy.

Any kid in school knows this country never traveled the road of prosperity without full participation by building. And frittering away more Government coin on a large scale, running up more deficits isn't the answer. Any economists who tell Mr. Roosevelt so should be kicked out on their ears.

Holding Companies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A holding company is a group of citizens pooling their savings to invest in growing industries—banks, stores, railroads, newspapers, utilities, many others. Several million men and women own shares of holding companies.

David Lilienthal, TVA director and Presidential adviser, now attacks utility holding companies, but before he joined TVA he wrote, in Columbia Law Review:

The spread of rural electrification, the rise of super-power systems and other developments intimately related to the public welfare, are directly attributable to the holding company. To it must go credit for the flow of capital into the utility industry, making possible extensions and improvements.

If this lawful, useful investment of savings can be destroyed by Government, whose savings are safe?

Mr. Hoffman's Ridicule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial on January 21, "If Pigs, Why Not Cars?" you suggest that the nation which follows the "bonus economics" theory will become more and more impoverished.

I was the one who suggested on the floor the purchase by the Government of used cars while debate on the silver purchase act was on and did so only to show the unsoundness of the course followed with reference to silver (see Congressional Record of January 15, pages 823-4—more particularly 824—my answer to Mr. Sadowski's question).

My theory is that good sense and sound logic having failed to convince those in authority that "spending to save" is fallacious, ridicule might answer the purpose.

The Post Impressionist

Boat From Palma.

SENORA said now that the revolution had come so peacefully to Spain, and Alphonso had obligingly packed and fled to England, we ought to go back to the mainland to see the fun.

Her husband was working on a futuristic painting of the new Spain in the garden. The cat was asleep on the doorstep, half-hidden by a huge wine jug. In the kitchen the cook was singing the Marseillaise, which she had learned painstakingly from the fisherman she hoped to marry now that everything was different and everyone soon would be prosperous.

"Everybody wanted the republic," said senora. "Everybody expected trouble. But there wasn't any. That's one thing about the people of modern Spain. They are peaceful. I'm happy to say one way you can tell a company of Spanish soldiers is that they all seem out of step. And if one of them sees a little blue flower he wants to pick, he stoops right in ranks and does it. We aren't warlike any more. We're too civilized. Viva la Republica!"

"That's right," agreed her husband, who had a pointed beard, as he came around the house with his brush in hand. "We ought to go tomorrow. Take a boat to Barcelona, and then go to Madrid."

"Tomorrow's May 1," recalled senora. "That's the Day of the Republic—its first May Day. Palma ought to be gay. Let's put everything together and get over the mountains early."

We said good-by to Soller next morning. May Day dawned in a milky mist over the little bay of the Mediterranean, but there were no fishing boats putting out, for it was the greatest holiday Spain had seen since Napoleon was driven far back into the Pyrenees. The little ships bobbed at anchor along the wharves. Their masters were getting ready to celebrate liberation from the crown. The buildings and houses along the main street were white and blue and pink when the sun lanced through the mist.

How were we to know, how were the inhabitants to dream, that in another six years their village and most of Mallorca would be an immense concentration base for Franco's Moors and Germans and Italians and Carlists? That one day 11 black bombers would roar from a Mallorcan base and kill and maim thousands of noncombatants in Barcelona and Valencia, along the Levant Coast, rich with orange groves and olive trees?

That day was one of promise and peace and great things to come. Spain was that day free, and had shaken off her shackles—with no bloodshed. There was to be singing in the streets, and the flag of the republic was to fly from every housetop.

"We ought to see a few people before we go," said senora's husband.

So we went to Hotel Marisol, by the tracks, and had a drink and said good-by to the bartender. Then we went up the crazily twisting side street to Mama Mia's bar, where the marines used to play chess, and laughed when we saw her serving free wine. We called at Bar Republica, across from the Church of Our Lady, on the corner. We said "adios" to the little man who drove the burro cart we used to rent.

Shortly before noon the boulevards to Palma shook to the tread of marchers as the parade of the workers swept by. They were not military men. They marched in columns of eight, and here and there a company of soldiers in khaki swung debonairly ahead of a band. There were youths, and middle-aged and old men with gnarled hands and wiry beards and the sun of Spain and the sea and the olive groves on their faces.

The women and children lined the streets. They waved their flags and cheered and cried "Viva la Republica," until the din might have reached Alphonso in England.

Every store was closed. We could not buy a drink until late that May Day. But somehow it did not seem necessary. The columns tramped on and on. We fancied the rumble of the feet sounded the death knell to autocracy. A cannon rumbled from the old fort from which the Mallorcans fought their ancient enemies, the Moors, centuries ago. Then there came a salvo of shots, echoing down the lovely bay of Palma.

"Not shots of war," senora said. "Salutes to peace. In Madrid, I hear, the palace has not been touched. The statues of all the monarchs from before the time of Ferdinand and Isabella, have not been mutilated. If all the revolutions could be like this—oh, if they only could be!"

In the afternoon there were bullfights out in the arena. Every street corner had its own carnival. Even the Civil Guards, in their red jackets and shiny black hats, relaxed. Merry-go-rounds jangled. On the backs of the wooden horses were the happy Spanish children—republican citizens of tomorrow. We bought some candy from an old, beshawled woman, and it was warm and sticky in the May weather.

The boat for Barcelona slid out into the bay that night. The lights of the city sank into the sea. We sat in the bar until late, drinking anisette.

"Viva la Republica," cried senora, lifting her glass. "In Madrid we will show you Pancho, the elephant!"

Just last week Pancho, the largest living target in Madrid, died of starvation.

I wonder if senora and her artist husband are dead, too. Probably. Maybe he finished his futuristic painting of the new Spain first. I hope so.

Perhaps the trouble with our toast on the boat for Barcelona was we did not break our glasses afterward.

Press Postage.

THE FUSS between the Post Office Department and the newspapers over the cost of toting press matter through the mails is still unsettled, and should be settled by some verdict more convincing than a flat, unqualified admission by each side that the other is a liar and a gyp.

PEGLER.

As matters stand, the Post Office Department still claims that in 1937 the cost of handling newspapers and other publications was almost $90,000,000 more than the postage paid on them. The department plays dirty pool in referring to this baggage as "newspapers and other publications," because, by the specific mention of newspapers and the rather general reference to magazines as "other publications" it bears down on the daily press, whereas much of the daily press avoids the mails. On the other hand, some of the big, obese, slick-paper magazines which ride the mails at second-class rates are so heavy they ought to have wheels under them.

• • • •

IN THIS the department is consistent with the Administration's policy of trying to discredit newspaper criticism of the New Deal. Some people, particularly publishers, believe that Mr. Roosevelt, by his own speeches and the inspired or needled orations of Harold Ickes and Mr. Farley, is trying to impair the freedom of the press.

I doubt that the President's purpose is as evil as that and incline to the belief that he merely wants to dispel the superhuman, lama-like illusion of the word "press," just as he commonized the Supreme Court by a course of propaganda which, for emphasis, depicted the justices as nine drooling old imbeciles.

Mr. Roosevelt and his Cabinet stooges want to publicize the fact that the press is a private business, conducted for profit, and that it is no worse than fair, considering that it was through the press that the country learned that the Roosevelts have at least a normal liking for a dollar.

The Tulsa Tribune runs a very high-sounding editorial on this dispute in which David Lawrence is credited with having reputed by statistics the $90,000,000 deficit advanced by Mr. Farley. I started to read Mr. Lawrence's piece, but he was so fast on the turns that I was flung off into a gully and came to wishing that I could get him to apply the same process to my expense account. My last recollection was that if a below-cost service were suddenly abolished the post office deficit would be worse than ever, and this led me to suspect that the New Deal economics had got Dave at last and that he was about to come out for the theory that it is possible to spend one's way out of debt.

• • • •

BUT A LITTLE further on the Tulsa Tribune comes to the point of saying that even if there were a deficit that would be all right, because America was made possible only through the dissemination of news from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and because the papers are an educational institution, telling the people how to vote.

Well, now, never me to knock my own store, but I think the interests of the press are best served by the avoidance of any such sanctimonious wordage unless it be carried among the funnies and not on the editorial page, where people will take it seriously and maybe decide the Mr. Big is more right than they ever suspected.

Because newspapers are business institutions and the most conscientious and ethical of them are in business for profit, as every stockholder and every advertising man knows. I have memories of having sat around the table many's the night after the paper was put to bed and of hearing men sound off about the educational function of the papers and their status as a public institution, but always with a smile. Not believing it ourselves, how can we expect the customers to believe it?

Wouldn't it be not only more honest but wiser to admit that the press deserves no subsidy from the Government in any guise and can't afford to accept a subsidy or even to permit any department of a hostile Administration to contend by any interpretation of figures that the press enjoys the status of a guest of the taxpayers?

This Administration is so reckless of money that it would much rather maintain the present rates and carry the loss, if any, in order to be in a position to denounce the press for moochery.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The All-Hot Makes Good.

The frankfurter and the hamburger are to be co-starred.

The event will take place at the New York World's Fair in 1939.

• • • •

Grover Whalen's detailed plans for the hot-dog, hamburger and soft drink arrangements have just been issued and are too de-luxey for words.

• • • •

Perhaps for the first time in history, the frankfurter becomes distinctly "big time" and the hamburger (with or without onion, lady?) takes its place in scope and blue-print alongside of the million-dollar lagoon, the Plaza of Fine Arts, the Hall of Science and the Peristyle of Whatziss.

• • • •

No more will the hot-dog frizzle in the atmosphere of the commonplace. No longer will it have to endure the lowly surroundings to which it has become so long accustomed. Nor will the hamburger eke out a sordid existence in a world devoid of color or class.

• • • •

Read Mr. Whalen's formal announcement, opening unto the frankfurter and hamburger the broader life:

"The stands at the World's Fair will be located in 90 batteries. Each battery will have several kinds of stands. A typical battery will combine a frankfurter and hamburger stand in the center, artistically flanked by ice cream, soft drink, cigarette and candy stands.

"Bids are returnable on the frankfurter and hamburger stands February 1. Some 70 stands are contemplated and it is estimated that they will gross $1,700,000."

• • • •

Whoops!

• • • •

The hot-dog and the hamburger in the two-million-dollar class! It's colossal. We wouldn't be surprised to hear that Mr. Whalen had arranged for an all-hot "preview" for society and the more fashionable critics. (With bicarb on the house.—Ed.)

• • • •

One million seven hundred thousand dollars! How much is that in weenies and hamburgers? If all the rolls used were stood on end, how many times higher than the Washington Monument would the pillars of dough be?

• • • •

And how many white flannel pants would it be possible to cover with mustard spots reaching from Perth Amboy, N. J., to Coral Gables, Fla., or vice versa?

• • • •

Let us have all the facts, Grover! The frankfurter has arrived! The hamburger has come through!

• • • •

What are those 200 men doing over there intently studying a pile of blue prints 6 feet high and having something to do with an elevated terrace covering 21 acres and featuring 12 blue lagoons and six symphony orchestra amphitheaters?

• • • •

What? Oh, about to break ground for the popcorn and peanut concessions! We thought so!

Sweet Neighbor

Uneconomic Silver Purchases From Mexico Seen Ordered To Protect U. S. Interests, But Socialization Continues.

By Herbert M. Bratter.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

EVEN good neighborliness should have its limits. In his Mexican policy Uncle Sam today finds himself in the position of carrying soup to a sick neighbor while that neighbor is sending her dogs to chase away his children. A year ago Mexico was in good economic health. That she "has had a bug," however, and has been growing ill has been clear to Washington economic doctors for quite some time. Only the uninformed public was surprised at the evidences of monetary weakness in Mexico implied in the United States Treasury's stabilization announcement of December 31 and the Mexican tariff increases of the same date, made public on January 19.

The Mexican constitution of 1917 contained far-reaching labor provisions, but it was not until 1931 that the Federal labor act, federalizing all labor legislation, came into being. Industry by industry, the government has been strengthening the position of the worker. In November 1936 a far-reaching law of expropriation was passed. It put all economic activity at the mercy of the government. In 1937 the pressure for reform was greatly augmented. Now Mexico is throwing over the major economic understandings which have governed relations with the United States. In September 1937 news of this changed attitude was officially imparted to the American Government by Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Beteta. So Washington had an idea what to expect.

Readers of Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico" will not begrudge President Lazaro Cardenas his ambition to restore to the Mexican people ownership of the land they till, or to improve their lot in other respects. But if reform is too hurriedly applied, friction and loss are bound to result. You can't change tires without stopping the car.

Drought And Recession Have Hit Mexico Seriously.

SINCE last summer economic conditions south of the Rio Grande have been deteriorating markedly. There has been drought and, in Mexico's chief foreign market, a "recession." The large Mexican estates are being broken up, railways and practically all industries are in process of immediate or ultimate nationalization, and the cause of the workers—collective labor contracts—has become the principal concern of the Federal Government. Individual capitalism in Mexico is being rapidly suppressed in favor of various forms of state control. This program has been encouraged and financed in recent years by large American purchases of Mexican silver, as was specifically acknowledged by President Cardenas in his recent annual message to his people.

American oil companies, manufacturers and other foreign investors have seen the handwriting on the wall. Since last summer they have been withdrawing their holdings to less reformist countries, satisfied to pay the official flight-of-capital tax or to buy their foreign exchange secretly on the "black bourse."

The withdrawal of an estimated 75,000,000 pesos of foreign capital from August through December occurred at a very inconvenient time for Mexico, since the program of setting up the agricultural population in communally owned enterprises requires imported machinery, tools and materials. The capital flight tends to use up the country's foreign exchange resources. It competes with the demand for foreign exchange to pay for the imports of machinery needed in the agrarian program.

Moreover, the break-up of large estates and the settling of workers on the land has had a tendency to diminish production, which has not only caused the government additional heavy expenditures, but has further diminished exports and increased imports. Meanwhile, the budgetary situation has been deteriorating, and the Bank of Mexico has been called upon for substantial and often secret aid.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the Bank of Mexico's metallic reserves declined between June 26, 1937, and January 8, 1938, from 195 to 113 million pesos, while the note issue remained unchanged. Meanwhile, loans and discounts, due to the requirements of the socialization program, grew from 138 millions to 172 millions while the central institution's deposits, reflecting the alarm of private banks, declined from 125 to only 89 million pesos, and would have declined much more had the private banks felt entirely free to exercise their judgment.

End Of London Agreement Threw Mexicans In Turmoil.

SINCE Mexico is the world's largest silver producer, and silver is a highly important Mexican export commodity, the uncertainty surrounding the price of silver with the approaching expiration of the London silver agreement last December caused considerable uneasiness in Mexico City. Finance Minister Suarez hurried to Washington, where the silver purchase act still required Secretary Morgenthau to buy foreign silver at such price, in such amounts, and on such occasions as he deemed in the public interest.

For some reason not easy to understand, certain elements in Mexico regarded it as a duty of the United States to give Mexico definite assurance as to the price of silver over the next year. When Washington announced officially that Mexican silver would not be bought during January, 1938, bitter protests were recorded in the Mexican papers. Great was their relief when, a few days later, it became known that the United States had extended its agreement with Mexico covering newly-mined silver to the end of 1938, and had, moreover, agreed to buy at 45 cents per ounce 35,000,000 ounces of silver accumulated by Mexico during the life of the London silver agreement.

The silver purchase act is the Government's official reason for buying silver. Yet, strange as it seems, some who voted for the silver purchase act do not know why we are buying foreign silver today. The silver purchase act may not represent Administration policy, but the deal with Mexico does represent Administration policy.

The Treasury is quoted as stating that the new silver arrangement with Mexico was a monetary arrangement only, and has no connection with the other Mexican-American questions under State Department consideration. Anyone acquainted with Mr. Morgenthau's respect for the niceties of departmental protocol knows that the Secretary would not have entered into a silver and monetary stabilization arrangement with Mexico at a time when American oil and other interests there were suffering from the socialization program, without consulting with the State Department.

In other words, the support of the Mexican peso announced in the Morgenthau-Suarez joint statement of December 31, and the agreements first to buy Mexican silver during January, then to buy it all through 1938, and finally to take over the previous accumulations of 35,000,000 ounces at 45 cents were all part of a "good neighbor policy not at all commanded by the silver purchase act.

Explanation Of Treasury Admits Unjustified Price.

IN EXPLAINING the purchase of the 35,000,000 ounces at 45 cents the Treasury explained that Mexico would otherwise have sold that metal in the market and thereby depressed the world silver price. Thus, the Treasury confessed what we otherwise know, that silver is not worth 45 cents. If the silver purchase act is to be conducted in America's best interests, the metal should be bought as cheaply as possible. If it is bought at more than what it would bring in the market, then the conclusion is inevitable that foreigners are being favored unnecessarily. Why should we pay more than necessary for silver, assuming that we have to buy it at all?

If it is incredible that our Mexican silver policy was formulated without reference to American interests at stake in Mexico's social experiment, it is equally incredible that the Suarez silver deals should have been effected here at the very moment when Mexico was working out or already had worked out an intricate schedule of tariff increases, was preparing to announce—on January 2—abrogation of the Morrow-Calles oil pact, and was moving ahead with other restrictive measures on American enterprise.

On the very December day when Washington agreed to buy Mexican silver, Mexico seized United States properties valued at $6,000,000. That the Mexican tariff increases were promulgated on the very day that this Government agreed to buy 35,000,000 ounces of silver should give food for thought to those Congressmen who still make possible continuance of that harmful "permissive and mandatory" law.

Bigger Navy

By Barnet Nover.

Rearmament And Foreign Policy.

DURING the next fiscal year the United States will spend well over a billion dollars for the maintenance and expansion of our military and naval establishments.

This is a staggering sum even when judged by our present inflated budgetary standards. But unless there is a decided change for the better in the international situation the chances are that American expenditures for defense purposes will increase rather than diminish as time goes on.

It is a far from pleasant prospect. There are other and more constructive uses to which the large additional sums to be devoted to rearmament could be put. But in view of existing circumstances this point has become academic. For this Nation cannot safely ignore the implications of the spread of international anarchy which lie at the root of the present race in armaments. Nor can it safely ignore the potentially dangerous effect of that race in armaments on our security.

• • • •

IN DECIDING to build up its defense forces this Nation recognizes the circumstance that, like it or not, we are part and parcel of the world of nations and vitally affected by world developments.

When the world was relatively at peace, as it was in the years between the Washington Conference and the Japanese occupation of Manchuria, it was possible for the United States to keep its defense expenditures down. But since then the tide has turned. After the Japanese militarists ran amuck in northeastern China, despite their nation's acceptance of the Nine-Power Treaty, the Briand-Kellogg Pact and the League Covenant, the world situation definitely began to grow worse.

There followed the rearmament of Germany, Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, the remilitarization of the Rhineland, the invasion of Spain by the Fascist powers and a renewed attempt by Japan to establish its undisputed hegemony in eastern Asia. As a consequence of these disturbing developments the League system of collective security broke down and a world-wide race in armaments, on a scale never before attempted, broke out. That race daily becomes more frantic and virulent.

• • • •

ALL THIS brings up a very important point.

Though never a member of the League, the security which League nations enjoyed or thought they enjoyed as members of that organization indirectly but none the less vitally benefited us. We played no role in European affairs. But as long as Europe seemed to be at peace we, too, were better off. We never even joined the World Court. But as long as international law was respected it was to our distinct advantage as a peaceful and law-abiding Nation. And, conversely, when crisis after crisis arose, disruptive of the peace of the world and of the painfully acquired standards of international conduct, these developments threatened our peace and our welfare.

The very frantic effort that has been made, since 1935, to build around our borders a paper wall of neutrality legislation to keep out the raging waters from overseas, shows how the spread of world chaos created very real alarm on this side. But this effort was doomed to fail because of its unrealism and its inadequacy.

The American people have never been willing to pay the price of complete economic isolation which might, conceivably, insulate this Nation against world disturbances. But at the same time the effort to achieve peace through mandatory neutrality laws tended to inhibit action in line with existing realities.

• • • •

IT WAS the undeclared war in the Far East which smashed the myth that the United States was or could remain indifferent to the existing international anarchy. For it was with reference to the Far East that this country had made its greatest post-war contribution to peace.

In the Far East the United States has, from the very beginning of its history, pursued a consistent and relatively undeviating policy which unconsciously or consciously rested on two principles. One was that all nations, including the United States, should have equal opportunity to trade with and do business with China. The second, the inevitable corollary of the first, was that China's territorial integrity should be preserved.

These principles were from time to time honored only in the breach. At the end of the last century an imperialistic struggle of great dimensions broke out in the Far East with all the European great powers and Japan participating. It almost led to the partition of China. After 1915 the effort to infringe on China's sovereignty was largely a Japanese effort. By the end of the World War, however, Japan's ambitions threatened to lead to war.

• • • •

TO AVERT such a calamity all the powers with interests in China came together in Washington. Discussion among them was on parallel lines. In the first place it was deemed necessary to secure from each of the powers a self-denying pledge to refrain from taking advantage of China's weakness and lack of unity to win special advantages in that country. With this achieved, it became possible for the major naval powers to agree to a limitation of their offensive naval armaments.

This was a recognition on our part, as it was on the part of Great Britain and Japan as well, that the armaments problem was basically political. But this principle we have refused to recognize with reference to the problem of armaments generally. Yet now to the surprise and chagrin of many Americans we find ourselves caught up in an expensive and dangerous race not of our making.

The moral is—or should be—clear. World peace is an American interest; world chaos a liability for us. To stand by on the sidelines while chaos spreads can do us no good. But there is at least a possibility that constructive action for peace by the United States in co-operation with other peaceful nations may yet do some good.

Certainly this Nation could hardly be in a worse position than it is if, during the past 18 years, we had pursued such a course instead of hugging to our bosoms the illusion of American isolation which flies in the face of reality.

Our billion dollar defense budget is the tribute we are now compelled to pay for holding to that illusion.

$200 A Second

By John C. Gebhart.

U. S. Public Debt Increases.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT is now spending at the rate of about $8,000,000,000 a year. This means that in one day we are spending $21,918,000, in one hour, $913,000, in one minute, $15,000, and in one second, about $200.

The Federal budget has not been balanced since June 30, 1930. Since then, the public debt has increased by about $21,000,000,000.

How much is $21,000,000,000? Enough to run the Federal Government for 30 years, at the rate which prevailed just before our entry into the World War. It is almost equal to the direct cost of the World War up through April 1, 1919.

• • • •

THE PACE of recent spending can be shown in another way. From July 1, 1930, to date (November 22, 1937), the Federal Government had spent $48,000,000,000. Let's compare this record with previous spending by the Federal Government. The records begin with March 1, 1789. In a little less than 130 years, from March, 1789, through Armistice Day, the total expenditures of the Federal Government were $48,300,000,000. The money spent in less than seven and a half years would have been sufficient to pay all of our Government expenses from the beginning to the conclusion of the World War!

(Commentator.)

Tom McCarthy

'I Remember, I Remember.'

"OH MY," he said, and he shifted his feet to the top of the desk. But he kept looking out the window.

"Look a' the rain," he said. "It's a fine day for the twenty-fourth of January! And the kids are probably dragging around in rubber coats. Times do change." And then he lit a cigarette, and returned his feet to the floor.

McCARTHY.

"Oh my," he said. After that it was quiet in the office, except for Nelson Bell's typewriter, and the voice of a copy boy.

Then the restless guy just broke down. And it was no trick seeing that he was worried.

"I'm thinking about the kids," he said. "In the old days they had adventure. They had cold winters, even here in Washington. Now, they have rain coats—and gosh only knows what. In the old days this was a real city. I mean in the days before the war."

I tried to find out just what he was talking about, because I still thought Washington was a pretty nice city, even in these days of the New Deal.

"Nice city? That's what it is, all right," he said. "But before the war this was a real city. It had a flavor to it. There was real adventure. And we had cold winters!"

After he'd got that far there was no stopping him. He wasn't an "oldest inhabitant," but he was the son of one. And he did have a memory.

"I'm thinking about the younger generation," he said, taking a deep drag on his cigarette. "Now in the old days this was a city for kids to grow up in."

I don't know whether it was coincidence or not, but when he said something about a city of cave-dwellers he seemed to be trying to get rid of a bit of tobacco on his lower lip. And his general demeanor did not reflect honor to a city of cave-dwellers.

"Why, in the old days," he said, "at this time of year, the kids would be skating on the Potomac or the Tidal Basin. Why, I remember one year when the ice broke up on the Tidal Basin in such big pieces that it shoved over onto the Speedway and threatened the trees.

"But, I'm not just kicking about the weather. This used to be a town of romance. I can remember when walking up Sixteenth street to school was an adventure. We had to pass by the Imperial Russian Embassy! And they had two Cossacks on duty outside the door.

"They were big boys if I ever saw them, and the kids were so scared they walked on the other side of the street. The Cossacks had big lamb-skin shakos and curled scimitars, and beards. Boy, those were the days!

"And when the Russian Ambassador went downtown, he rode in an open carriage with two Cossacks on the box.

"AND TAKE Pimmet's Run, and the canal boats. The modern kids don't know anything about them. But they were big things in the old days. Pimmet's Run is the little creek flowing into the Potomac above the Chain Bridge. And I suppose it's still there.

"When I was a kid it was a place of mystery. A drummer boy had been drowned there during the Civil War. And legend had it that if you stayed there until midnight, you could hear him beating out a roll on his drums. Of course it was the river, as it came over the rapids. But who knows of Pimmet's Run, now?

"And if that weren't mournful enough there were the tin horns of the canal-boat captains. And we'd go up to Georgetown on a Saturday afternoon, and hook a ride on a boat up to the Broadwaters, above Glen Echo. Then we'd hook a ride back. That was not so long before the war, and canal boats were one of the biggest things in our lives . . . canal boats with the mules in the forepart and the family in the back.

"Take stores. What adventure is in them for the modern kid? They're air-conditioned. You can't smell them! But I remember Magruders when it was up near Dupont Circle. Why on a cold day you could get the whiff of coffee, and spices from half a block away. It was a treat just to walk by.

"And speaking of smells there was the open window of the kitchen of the Convent of Mercy on Connecticut avenue. The convent was where the Mayflower Hotel is now. And they had a big coffee mill in the kitchen, and on warm summer days when the window was open we kids would sneak up to get the smell of the newly ground coffee.

• • • •

"THE WHOLE town's changed. Before the war it was a personal place. You didn't have chain stores, and when you went shopping you knew everybody in the store. And on Sundays when you walked on Connecticut avenue, after church and before dinner, you knew everybody you passed. And anybody that amounted to anything took that walk . . . whole families of them.

"Adventure? Why these poor modern kids aren't one, two, three with what we had. Why, there never was a Hains Point in our day. It used to be a swamp. And I guess things were even better before that. My dad tells me they used to catch frogs in the swamp at the foot of the Washington Monument.

"And speaking of my dad, I remember the awful scandal the folks talked about. One of the daughters of our neighbor got locked in Lafayette Park with a boy, at 8 o'clock at night. Yeah, the park used to have a fence around it. And they locked it up every night. It was quite a scandal, for a young lady to get locked in . . . without a chaperon.

• • • •

"AND PEOPLE have changed, too. I mean there aren't the characters around town for kids to look at and get scared by, anymore. Take the lamplighter. He was a mysterious guy. He always carried a pack on his back for burnt-out mantles. We had arc lamps of course. He was one of our bogey-men.

"And there was 'Old Shack,' a grand old colored man. He carried a pack on his back and that used to scare us, too. He went all through the Northwest section clipping horses. And he carried the clippings in the pack on his back. Everybody knew him. But we kids never did find out what he did with the clippings.

"But of all the memories, the one I'll never forget was the window display in Rauscher's confectionery store, at Christmas. Every year it was the same, but it was good. They didn't try to surprise you with novelty in those days.

"But we liked it just the same, when he saw the ribbon-candy sleigh, on a spun sugar base go into Rauscher's window at Connecticut avenue and L street, we knew then that the Christmas holidays were just around the corner.

"But now——! Take a look out that window. Rain! In January. Yes, sir, times have changed!"

I. C. C. Finishes Hearing on Rail Rate Raise Plea

Major Steel Companies Ask Exemption of Iron Ore From Increase.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission completed hearings yesterday on the request of railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates.

Oral arguments on the case will begin next Monday. Briefs were ordered filed by February 9.

During the day, major steel companies asked the Commission to exempt iron ore if the 15 per cent freight rate increase asked by railroads were granted.

Companies from Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia said the steel industry already was more than fairly burdened with its share of transportation charges.

Among the companies which filed exemption pleas and objections were Republic Steel Corporation, Weirton Steel Co. of Weirton, W. Va.; Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., Alan Wood Steel Corporation of Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh Steel Co., Wheeling W. Va., Steel Corporation; American Rolling Mills Co. of Ohio, and the Vulcan Detinning Co. of New Jersey.

Most of these companies did not state their views on rate increases for other than iron ore. However, the Weirton company said that it did not oppose higher railroad rates on materials other than iron ore.

Eight lime and lime products companies filed objections to any flat percentage increase, which they said would disturb present rate relationships. They said, however, that they did not object to some increases.

Money Agreement Unhurt by Franc, Says Morgenthau

By the Associated Press.

The recent decline in the French franc "hasn't yet" endangered the tripartite agreement for international currency stabilization, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said yesterday. The Secretary declined to discuss the franc further, saying the situation was France's problem.

The Secretary also said the increase of Mexican tariffs has not affected the Treasury's arrangement for purchasing approximately 5,000,000 ounces of silver each month from Mexico, since the silver understanding was purely a monetary matter and had no relation to ordinary trade.

Roosevelt Called In Sympathy With Nicaragua Canal

President Roosevelt and Representative Ed. V. Izac (Democrat), of California, conferred at the White House yesterday on Izac's proposal for a canal through Nicaragua, a project which Naval and military officials say would be of strategic importance in case of war in the Pacific.

Izac said Mr. Roosevelt showed a "very sympathetic and encouraging attitude" but declined to commit himself at this time. Izac has introduced a bill authorizing the canal, which has the Nicaraguan government's approval, and would cost $700,000,000.

Roper Asserts Business, U. S. In 'Partnership'

Commerce Secretary Says Co-operation Needed to Save Profit System.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper declared tonight that Government "is definitely in partnership with business as its servant and protector and will remain so," in sounding a plea for co-operation in the partnership to enable corporate business to "function for the good of all."

"It is recognized," the Secretary of Commerce said, "that the limits of Government should be extended only as the failure of industrial leadership makes the extensions seem imperative, for safeguarding the capitalistic system and the public good."

Roper spoke at the fiftieth anniversary dinner of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce and over a radio station.

He stressed the necessity for the Government-business "partnership" to co-operate in safeguarding the principle of the profit system because the Government, he said, must rely upon tax from income as its chief source of revenue.

"Business as a whole recognizes the need for a broad program of social security," the Commerce Secretary asserted. "Must it not accept the corollary policy that Government, as the representative of public interest, is a partner in all business which affects the national income?"

The most effective course through which to achieve safe results, Roper said, was a more solid front of constructive business initiative.

Trust Head Tells Of Huge Dividends

By the Associated Press.

W. R. Burwell, of Cleveland, former president of Continental Shares, Inc., told the Securities Commission yesterday the huge trust paid dividends totaling $325,000 on 10,000 "founders shares," which cost their owners $1 each.

Burwell said at a hearing in connection with the commission's study of investment trusts that the shares were bought and sold by Otis & Co., Cleveland underwriter for Continental, which is now in receivership.

Ill Official Reaches Baltimore on Clipper

Baltimore, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Pan-American Bermuda Clipper landed here today carrying on a stretcher, John Dickinson Bell Talbot, 67, secretary of the corporation of Hamilton, Bermuda.

Smiling after the 4-four 39-minute flight, the Bermuda official was taken from the plane to an ambulance parked at the ramp. He left for New York City, accompanied by his son, Dr. William T. Talbot, where he will enter St. Luke's Hospital.

The plane, landing in a rain squall, carried 13 other passengers.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

People and Events.

The American Federation of Government Employes points out a now lonely house in Cincinnati as the birthplace of the Federal merit system. The house, on Liberty street, overlooking the Ohio River and the Kentucky hills, was the home of Senator George Hunt Pendleton. The first draft of the civil service was made, tradition says, by a Senate sub-committee in the Pendleton house. The bill subsequently pased the Congress on January 16, 1883. But the point is, the house is now "lonely looking;" and when so many lesser spots in America are established as shrines.

A. G. O. employes will give a minstrel show for the Blind Institute of Washington on Thursday, February 17, at Epiphany Church Hall. The event is solely for the pleasure of the blind; there will be no admission charge. Anyone wishing to take part as an individual performer or as a member of the chorus may communicate with Eddie McGinnis, room 593, State Department Building, on or before Thursday. The first rehearsal will be on February 2 at Columbus Polytechnic Institute, Eighteenth and H streets northwest . . . A. G. O. Lodge 2, A. F. G. E., has accepted in membership the following persons: Elizabeth Balduc, Thomas R. Connor, Constance M. Ellison, Zella M. McConaughy, Lowell G. Moore, Siegel A. Osborne, Everett Radford, Bonnie J. Smith, Robert E. Washburn, Ina G. Wenzel and Ruth Graham.

The famed I. D. R. A. has elected officers for 1938, as follows: President, Stanley W. Crosthwait, assistant to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; first vice president, Howard R. Stinson, solicitor's office; second vice president, Edward J. Kelly, administrative assistant, National Capital Parks; secretary, Hillory A. Tolson, assistant director, Park Service; treasurer, E. J. Armstrong, Office of Indian Affairs; board of directors and executive committee, Paul J. Bergh, Mr. Crosthwait, Charles R. Graham, H. Herbert Hughes, Mr. Kelly, John H. Lloyd, John C. Marchant, Wesley R. Nelson, Pierce M. Rice, Mr. Stinson, Mr. Tolson and Herbert L. Wooten; activity leaders include Michael W. Straus, J. L. Acuff, S. M. Barrett, Ian Forbes, Henry Praeger, Frank Updike and Ray B. Dame.

Peter J. Connolly, of Jamaica, N. Y., an administrative assistant in the solicitor general's office, Post-office Department here, was unanimously re-elected president of the New York State Democratic Club of Washington. Other officers are: Mrs. Eva Steimer, Elmhurst, N. Y., first vice president; Leonard Klotz, Manhattan, a Federal auditor, second vice president; Demetrius N. Theodore, Manhattan, third vice president; Frederick Frost Poughkeepsie, recording secretary; Dorothy Misner, Buffalo, financial secretary; Betty Ruth Southampton, treasurer, and Dorothy M. Ebert, of the Bronx, sergeant at arms. The club recently enrolled Samuel Loeb, John H. Shepard, James H. Gunn and Albert Settino, bringing the membership to 404 persons. This is the first time we ever heard of a feminine sergeant at arms in an organization mostly of males. The fact is, a gentleman was nominated for the post, but declined. Mrs. Ebert was then elected unanimously . . . The A. G. O. Duplicate Contract Bridge Club sessions were suspended during the holidays, but will be resumed in a couple of weeks for a new season tournament. The members are sensitive about references to suspension bridge . . .

The regular monthly educational forum of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employe Unions will be held at 8 o'clock Friday evening at 710 Fourteenth street northwest. Ulrey J. Biller, N. F. F. E., national vice president, will lead a discussion on pending retirement legislation. All N. F. F. E. members are invited . . . Meetings announced by the N. F. F. E. for this week, are as follows: Tonight, 8 o'clock, A. G. O. Local 372, 710 Fourteenth street; Wednesday, 8 p. m., Yard Navy, Local 250, Southeast Library, Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and Friday, 5 p. m., Executive Council, Local 2, 710 Fourteenth street, and 8 p. m., Educational Forum, 710 Fourteenth street.

Jobs: Dairy barn attendant, Bureau of Animal Industry and Bureau of Dairy Industry, Agriculture Department, Beltsville, Md., $1,200 a year; applicants must have had certain experience, must have reached their nineteenth but not have passed their forty-fifth birthday . . . On January 18, a bill was introduced in the House which proposes to appropriate $850,000 to cover the administrative expenses of the Railroad Retirement Board from now until June 30, 1938. The support of Local 13, U. F. W. A., has gone behind the bill. Its passage, the union points out, would enable the board to reinstate the employes dismissed week before last, and would make further dismissals unnecessary . . . The Committee for Co-operative Medical Service for Federal Employes announces two talks by Dr. Kingsley Roberts, director of the Bureau of Co-operative Medicine of the Co-operative League of the U. S. A., to be held tomorrow evening. One will be a radio address over WJSV, from 6:30 to 6:45 on the subject of "Co-operative Medicine." The other will be given in the auditorium of the South Agriculture Building at 8 o'clock. The subject will be "The Patient and Co-operative Medicine." It is expected that this will be the first in a series of talks and radio addresses on the general subject of group medicine and health insurance under sponsorship of the Committee on Co-operative Medical Service for Federal Employes . . . Tickets for the Farm Credit Club dinner-dance for February 12, at the Raleigh Hotel, will go on sale the end of this week.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

THE dominating factor in the fiercest bridge battles is time or, to use the technical term, "tempo." The defenders may have perfectly good tricks in their hands but may never be able to cash them due to the fact that declarer "gets there first" with his own tricks. Often one side or the other can gain tempo by knocking out adverse stoppers, thus establishing its own next ranking cards. This

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 8 6 4 ♡ 7 5 ◇ 9 6 3 ♣ A K J 7 4
♠ Q J 10 3 ♡ 8 4 ◇ K J 5 ♣ 8 6 3 2	North West East South	♠ 9 5 2 ♡ A K 3 ◇ Q 10 7 4 2 ♣ 9 5
	♠ A K 7 ♡ Q J 10 9 8 2 ◇ A 8 ♣ Q 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the spade Queen, declarer winning and immediately playing the heart Queen. East won, and considered his return lead. The opening lead marked declarer with the spade King as well as the Ace. Since he had lacked the Ace and King of Hearts and yet had jumped from two clubs to four hearts, it was highly probable that he had at least the Ace of diamonds. East had already lost one of his heart stoppers. He could now remove one of declarer's stoppers in spades or diamonds, but, of course, not both. To return a spade would probably establish a spade trick. But, on the next play, East would lose his other heart stopper and at that point could do no more than remove declarer's probable diamond Ace. What good would that do if the defenders never regained the lead in order to cash an established diamond trick? Obviously, the tempo was against East and, since it could not be changed in his favor, he properly looked for some other line of defense. The solution stared him right in the face—he would "kill" the dummy.

On winning with the heart King, East returned a club. Declarer won and made a valiant effort to get out the trumps so as to protect dummy's club suit. It was a hopeless task, however. East won with his heart Ace and promptly returned his other club, his one hope being that declarer had started with only two clubs. Declarer, hoping against hope, attempted to discard on the third club, but East ruffed and after that declarer had no chance to salvage his losing spade and losing diamond.

Lee Riggs, auctioneer, knows tobacco . . . he explains why experts prefer Luckies 2 to 1

"THIS SEASON," says Mr. Riggs, "I've sold tobacco in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee. More than 7,500,000 pounds, I figure, amounting to about $2,000,000 in money.

"Time after time I've seen Lucky Strike get the prettiest tobacco in the auction. That's one reason I've smoked Luckies ever since I've been an auctioneer.

"Another reason I and so many other tobacco auctioneers prefer Luckies is because we have to watch out for our throats." (Luckies are extra-easy on the throat because the "Toasting" process takes out certain irritants found in even the finest tobacco.)

Mr. Riggs goes on to say that Luckies are the top cigarette with people who know tobacco. And he is talking facts. Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes combined.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Defense and Support' Accorded 'A. M. R.,' Who Expressed 'Contempt' for Modern Girls.

Sorely disillusioned by "the young ladies of today . . . who take their love where they find it," a young man of 25 wrote this column two weeks ago to say he wouldn't "marry one for all the rice in China." He asked: "Where is the girl of yesterday . . . or does such a girl exist?" His provocative statements and questions aroused a storm of comment, which continues to flow into this desk on every mail. A number of letters dealing with subject have already been published here, as space permitted. Today, "Another Man Reader" makes reply to those who have attacked his attitude, and receives, at long last, some of the "corroborative testimony from men" which he has asked for in his first leter. It is our intention to make this column the "last round," so to speak, on this subject, since other problems of a different nature are urgently awaiting consideration here. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps "Another Man Reader" will allow me to throw in the towel for him. I have been one of his seconds from the start, and I don't like to see him too badly beaten by stronger opposition. He has carried quite a few rounds, despite the uneven opposition. He should be permitted a gracious leave before the invincible forces of prudery and hypocrisy enter into this one-sided fray in even greater strength. Sincerely yours, COLLEGE MAN.

• • • •

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In defense and support of "A. M. R.," I wish to report that, after many years of "decent behavior" on dates, I awakened to the rather shocking truth that the girls I had been dating were treating me as though I were an oddity. They felt I was either emotionally barren or superlatively choosey for not making passes at them. Yet logical idealism was my only reason for so behaving. My love and respect for my own sisters led me to hope that other men might show them the same consideration which I was willing to show other men's sisters.

• • • •

However, when I discovered that the modern maiden expects every man to make "passes," and that she regards him as insulting or stupid when he doesn't, I stopped short. After due thought, I decided to test all the girls I had been dating. My success in campaign after campaign left me confused and alarmed. The carefree, easy comradeship was gone. Ideals and honest values were gone. No longer did I feel that I could speak in an intelligent or interesting way to a girl. I felt I would be deadly boring and uninteresting if I discussed books, music or politics. The only safe topics were risque stories and flagrant attacks on all conventions. My solution to this sad state of affairs was to give up dating. I seldom go out now, except when my sisters insist that I escort some friend of theirs.

• • • •

Unlike "A. M. R," I do not condemn all girls. I still have faith and hope. Perhaps I shall be fortunate in meeting some girls who still retain their pride and are self-respecting enough to realize some men still believe that sexual intimacy should be reserved as the sacrosanct foundation upon which successful marriage is built. Sincerely, ATHOS.

"A. M. R." Offers Rebuttal.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: With regard to my original letter (published January 11), I wish to express my sincere appreciation of your answer and advice, much of which was food for thought (a process of which some of your readers seem to believe me incapable). I must confess that I received a few verbal slaps in the face from your reply, but I was forced to excuse them in view of the fact that you couched them in language both subtle and tactful.

Many young ladies were not so kind in their wordy attacks. They saw fit to transform your light taps into blows which were supposed to leave me hanging on the ropes; while those two egotistical exponents of twentieth century hypocrisy, "Two Luckier Men," attempted to deliver a knock-out punch . . . If these two young men have been to college for four years, they certainly didn't learn anything. Maybe they attended a monastery.

• • • •

It is most fortunate that I possess feelings which do not bruise easily. My character and integrity have been questioned by so many of your correspondents that I can only conclude my letter touched a sore spot in the realm of actuality. It is the truth that hurts. You seem to derive some satisfaction from the fact that my disillusioning experiences with modern girls have not been corroborated by other men. However, if you will examine the letters since printed in your column, you will discover that the young ladies, at least, supported my contentions. Some of these female lovelornists became so engrossed in attacking certain of my statements that, all unwittingly, they acknowledged others.

• • • •

Promiscuity was admitted by the young lady ("A. L.," see column of January 18) who said that in order to secure dates the average girl must cater (most unwillingly, I am sure) to the tastes and demands of her escort. And whose fault is the girl's right to grant or to deny; that? The man's? I maintain it is but sad to relate, they all grant. And for your information, Miss Haworth, there are no girls left of the "Sir, how dare you?" school, nor any of the "You cur, sir!" school. If there were, I'd have run up against them a long time ago. No. I haven't loked in the museum—yet.

• • • •

To the young men who commented so unfavorably on my first letter (especially "Average Man," see column of January 21), I say: "Barnum was right." I was in your boat once, A. M., but it leaks horribly. Ponce de Leon never found the Fountain of Youth, but it should have been easy, compared to the task these romanticists set for themselves. They will be content to marry damaged goods and later on will wail and howl about it, when they discover the fact. I'll do my moaning and groaning now, but if you prefer to reserve yours for the future, when it's too late, go ahead, brother.

No, "Cynical Girl," it never occurred to me that some girls would not know how to cope with a man on the make. Nor did it occur to me that black is white. Such girls don't exist. Maybe you didn't understand that that was the idea I was trying to convey . . . Some of the logic employed by your correspondents was nothing short of terrific, Miss Haworth. One young lady, after an intricate process of deduction, arrived at the startling conclusion that since I am an average boy, therefore I am not above average! Correct, young lady, correct! Nor am I below average. Sorry to disappoint you.

• • • •

I should like to compliment "Modern Mother" (see column of January 21). In my opinion, she submitted the best letter published. She displayed rare and mature judgment in philosophically facing the facts. In fairness to me, may I impose on you once again, Miss Haworth, and ask that you print this letter? A. M. R.

Learn Music Appreciation

THIS rising tide of music—this age of great radio orchestras and musical motion pictures—what does it do for you?

Does it add to your pleasures, your social contacts? Are you at home with people of cultivated musical tastes? Or, when the talk turns to music, are you the embarrassed outsider?

No real barrier lies between you and the cultured group that enjoys music. If you can respond to a lovely perfume or to a dramatic sunset, you can respond to music—for music appeals to the senses as these do. With a few facts to guide you, you can soon be at home with music lovers.

What is the symphony orchestra? A group of instruments which singly or together can express the whole range of human emotion—from laughter to tears.

Isn't your fancy aroused by the frail sweet melody which begins the "Waltz of the Flowers"—in Tschaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite?" That's played by the oboe, a cousin of the birdlike flute.

In the introduction to Overture "William Tell," emotions are more deeply stirred, for then the rich-toned cello speaks.

Can music tell a story? Sometimes—as in Richard Strauss' "A Hero's Life." But the real enchantment of music is in the mood it creates. Whoever heard Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody without falling under its gypsy spell?

What is the difference between light and grand opera? Between folk and art songs? Is jazz to be despised?

Today's HEALTH TALK

Why Young Folks Blush.

We discussed yesterday the recent work on the influence of the brain centers on those actions of the body commonly thought of as automatic. A good example is that phenomenon so generally interesting, especially to young people, of blushing. Blushing is due to a sudden dilation of the blood vessels of the face. It is, as everyone who is bothered with too frequent attacks of it unhappily knows, beyond voluntary control. Yet certainly it is caused by impulses which affect the very highest center of the brain—the mention of a sweetheart, a name, a denial, the hint of a clandestine appointment—it is nature's own lie detector.

I have before me a quaint old book, printed in 1839, called the "Physiology or Mechanism of Blushing," by Thomas H. Burgess, M. D. It describes the different varieties of the blush—the true blush, the blush of feeling, the false blush, the deceptive or legal (sic) blush, the blush or flush of rage, etc. All of them are involuntary but distinctly associated with mental states, and for the comfort of those who are afflicted to their embarrassment with this habit, let me quote the author who says, "This clearly proves my former assertions that the blush is evidently a result of reason, and cannot take place without its impulse, else why is the congenital idiot incapable of exhibiting this phenomenon?"

In the light of the latest researches into the functions of the nervous system, we must assume that somewhere in the frontal lobe of the brain are nerve cells that have connections with the cells of the sympathetic nervous system, controlling the movements of the blood vessels of the face. It may be that any day now such a center will be discovered.

Similar centers exist, closely connecting the voluntary and involuntary actions. The grasping reflex is one—when you reach out your hand to take hold of something, at the same time the sweat glands pour out a small film over the skin, making it easier to hold on to whatever you are going to pick up. People deprived of this always have to moisten the fingers when dealing cards, turning the pages of a book, etc.

As to treatment, for blushing, it is perhaps well that there is reliable treatment. Time is the most reliable cure, and you may be sorry some time that hardening process has cured your blushing.

Pink With Black.

Olivia De Havilland, who believes pink brings her good luck, wore that new shocking shade of it to the Philharmonic. Her black taffeta frock had its very full short skirt lined with pink taffeta, and the bright touch was repeated again in the lining of the short sleeves and in her suede pull-on gloves. Her hat was an off the face model in black velvet.

Fashions for 1938 Stress Simplicity With Heavy Gems

Paris (U.P.).—Fashions for 1938 promise to be very simple and decollete to set off the increasing popularity of heavy jewels.

Gold shades, with which rubies are especially attractive, already are gaining prominence. Lace often is gold-threaded. The off-shoulder line is popular with bodices cut scantily, frequently reaching to the waistline at the back.

Indian jewelry, rich in ruby, to wear with the new sari-type gowns and wound turbans, is the latest.

Three-deep ruby bracelets are made to wear above the elbow. Huge twin-stone rings—both rubies or ruby and sapphire—are being worn on the little finger.

At Mauboussin's Marlene Dittrich selected a ruby-clasped gold watch. At Koven Brothers the Duchess of Leeds chose a sapphire and ruby daisy, which can be attached to a golden leaf and worn as a clip or mounted on a diamond bracelet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 24.

I AM ALWAYS interested in movie youngsters' mamas, and what they think and do, and I never miss an opportunity to mingle with them if I can help it. So it was nice to visit the other day with Mabel Cooper Bigelow, whose strapping son, Jackie, was in town making a round of personal appearances ahead of his new picture, "Boy of the Streets."

We all remember the chubby, round-cheeked appeal of Jackie Cooper in his childhood—what a team he and big Wally Beery were! But now he is at the gangling age which is almost invariably fatal to screen kids who won fame and pelf as baby stars. Mabel, who Jackie calls "Honey," says that her boy is passing through it gracefully. And since I just read that he had signed for two films that will bring him $31,000, she's obviously right. That sort of money will help him through his adolescence very nicely. Incidentally, when you see him, don't call him Jackie. He hates it because it sounds kiddish. Make it Jack—he'll beam.

This lad, who is awfully nice to his mother and walks a chalk line when she chooses to draw one, is big and stocky. He certainly eats well enough to grow into a Cardiff giant. I saw him at breakfast, and all the poor lad could get down consisted of a pair of eggs, ten strips of bacon, a tower of toast, some fruit and a scuttle of near-coffee. Then he was off to the theater to work.

• • • •

Above all, his mother and stepfather have succeeded in keeping him simple—the last test for a movie child. He gets $10 a week, and that has to do him, including dates. His wardrobe has only four suits—not for economy, but because his mama says it's silly to buy more, since he outgrows them almost from week to week. His favorite dish is ice cream, he drives his own car and waits for what fate has in store for him as a movie grown-up. Many have made good, including Anita Louise and Mitzi Green. Jackie—pardon me, Jack Cooper is in there punching vigorously as he passes through that trying period of 16-17!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In spite of all our skating madness, our beloved country has never yet turned out a really top-flight figure skater comparable to such a lollipop genius as Sir Sonja Henie. Not even our Maribel Vinson has reached this stature. But the other day I said hello to one of our most brilliant girls in this line, the 20-year-old New Yorker named Audrey Peppe, who has spent five months in England studying and practising. The latter's the thing. "Four hours daily, from October through March, is a minimum," says Audrey, and that's what she'll do. Her big ambition is to win the national title. My, that's work—about as much rehearsing as it takes to become a tennis champeen!

• • • •

And I also said good-by to the lovely blonde Russian dancer, Tamara Geva, the girl with the loveliest legs, who just sailed on the Aquitania to appear in the London production of "Idiot's Delight," which served Lunt and Fontanne last season. She's actually going to play the role created by Fontanne, with Raymond Massey opposite. Goodness, that's a big order for a little dancer!

• • • •

Remember when everybody warned the Nation's girls about leaping off to Hollywood with only youth, beauty, a lipstick and a prayer? Now Munro Leaf has done the trick about New York. He wants to warn all the hometown girls about regarding this hamlet as a promised land. Promised what? Oh, nerve-jangles, at any rate. His tome has the awkward title of "Listen, Little Girl, Before You Come to New York." That's an over-sized mouthful.

• • • •

There hasn't been a big movie in years that hasn't been accompanied by a big style-promotion drive, and now, of course, it's Disney's marvelous "Snow White." Gold charms of her and the seven dwarfs, silk prints and even hat models have appeared on many of the local counters. And there'll be many more. I expect dwarf suits for the tikes, and cosmetics for the young ladies! Great are the movies, and their merchandising possibilities!

Bright-Hue Jackets, Dark Skirts Worn

Pastel Shades Favored in Midwinter Show.

Paris (U.P.).—Pastel or bright jackets with dark skirts are introduced for the midseason at Lucile Paray, where navy is an outstanding color note combined with white touches and occasional brilliant red.

An apron front is a novelty on a navy crepe designed with white trimmed neckline and short sleeves, and sprays of silver kid in flower design at either side of the bodice trim a navy two-piece frock of simple design. A navy crepe frock is presented with a matching coat, both parts of the ensemble trimmed with white braid which outlines the coat edges and neckline. Red is introduced as a tie at the beltline.

A pastel blue costume for Southern wear is made with blue fox-edged cape. The dress is made with vertical stitching on the blouse and the same motif in horizontal design for the skirt. Another costume combines rose and green with stitching and detail the only trim.

Apple Butter on Meat.

Place a thin layer of spiced apple butter on baked pork chops or smoked ham slices. Add the butter about 15 minutes before the meat is removed from the oven.

Things to Avoid In Dinner-Table Conversations

Loud, Persistent Talker Is One of Most Common 'Social Pests.'

By Margaret Wallace

The old-fashioned girl used to be schooled in the art of polite conversation. If this were the habit now some of the "social pests" present at many Washington functions might be eliminated.

According to one hostess, the most annoying of these social pests is the loud and persistent talker. The person who talks so loudly to her partner or the person on the other side so that she can be heard by all the others at the dinner table could not expect to be a very welcome guest. This does not include the guest who has a knack of leading general dinner-table conversation.

Things to Avoid.

The most obnoxious of the loud-talker type is the one who knows a story and insists on telling it, or who will insist on commenting on a subject not pleasant to all at the table. Dinner guests should guard against raising their voices so that what they are saying can be heard by everyone else at the table.

The persistent talker also ranks high as a social pest. Usually this type of guest starts on one subject and continues from soup to nuts. As much a pest is the talker who is determined to tell a story to the end whether the listeners are interested or not. Related to these two is the interrupter who seldom permits another guest to finish a story or a remark.

Another social pest is the "smarty" who has personal remarks and wisecracks about everyone at the table or at least those near him. The complaining talker, who will relate all troubles and retail likes and dislikes, certainly belongs to the list of undesirable dinner guests.

The rules of polite conversation, as taught to the old-fashioned girl and practiced by the well-bred man and woman today, demand that the voice never be pitched so that it intrudes on the conversation or thoughts of those who are not within the circle of conversation at the moment. Also, the well-bred conversationalist never asks personal questions or makes personal remarks.

Jacket Frock Adopted, With Bolero Touches

Chicago (AP).—The jacket frock is prominent in the spring collections with variations of the bolero widely used. Dress sleeves—and often those of the jacket, too—are short. Shoulders have that squared look, but it is toned down.

The dress silhouette has a close fitted line from under the breasts to the hips. The skirts may continue scant, carrying out the pencil-slim silhouette or flare from below the hip line.

Stars' Exercises Make Beautiful Underpinnings of 'Scrawny' Legs.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHAT MAKES beautiful legs? Are they something that lucky people like Eleanor Powell, Ginger Rogers and Ruby Keeler are born with? Or is that devastating symmetry the result of exercise that anyone can do?

Well, now and then the good fairies do attend a christening and send their favored godchildren out into the world with flawless underpinnings that curve exquisitely from ankle to knee . . . but most of us were not so fortunate. For example, there is RKO's young star-in-the-making, Dorothy Moore. To look at Miss Moore's legs now, one would never think of them as "thin and scrawny," yet three years ago these were the correct adjectives. Miss Moore did it with exercise, and says so with pleasing frankness.

Dancing May Assure Beauty.

It seems to me that anyone who dances as much as Eleanor Powell, or who takes the equivalent exercise, is practically assured of beautiful legs. Even with a little exercise and a lot of perseverance, a good deal can be done to round out legs that are too thin or too slim down those that are too thick. Of course, it takes longer to change leg contours than to take a tuck in the waistline, but you can improve your legs.

Fashion keeps on selling us short on skirts and summer is in the offing with scant relief from brevity, so there is every incentive to exercise—if your legs are not all they should be. Stretching exercises elongate the leg muscles and slim thick calves and ankles, and contracting exercises mold and round legs that are too skimpy.

Easy Exercises.

Begin with the following exercise, which is easily varied to stretch or to contract the leg muscles:

POSITION: Toss your feet back over your head so that the toes touch the floor beyond. Hold the knees as straight as you can. Oh, so you can't make it! Well, keep trying. Brace the hips with the hands, point the toes and touch them to the floor in a brisk kicking movement. Now, go into reverse, pointing the heels and contracting the toes to pull them toward the instep, and strike the floor with the balls of the feet. Just a few kicks will do for the beginning.

A leg exercise in which there is little action is one of the most effective. Sit on the floor with the legs stretched straight out in front. Grasp the feet with the hands near the toes and pull toward you.

Proof that the average pair of legs gets very little exercise is in the soreness which results from a few stretching or contracting movements. Ease into your leg exercise gradually, but keep it up.

Reported Ban on News Of Army Society Denied

Radio Gossip Columnist's Rumor Is Scouted by Military Press Relations Officer, Though Admitting Basis Exists.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

When a well-known gossip columnist announced over the radio Sunday night that Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, had issued an edict that news on social events at Army posts was to be suppressed—the columnist started something.

Gen. Craig's telephone buzzed steadily all day yesterday. His aide spent the morning and a good part of the afternoon denying the rumor.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"So far as I know," he chuckled in reply to each query, "Gen. Craig has issued no such order."

The report was . . . in view of plans for an expanded military program, the Army certainly didn't profit by being played up in social columns, which all too frequently gave the impression its officers were butterflies flitting merrily from party to party . . . So—again the radio rumor has it—the Chief of Staff had decided once and for all to end reporting of Army dinners, dances, teas and social what-not. Otherwise, civilians in general and Congress in particular might get the wrong idea.

The truth? I got it yesterday directly from headquarters. "The Chief of Staff has issued no such order," declared Col. Alexander D. Surles, in charge of press relations. Then, explaining how such an impression might have originated, he said there had long been a sentiment in Army circles that reporting of social events should be kept at a minimum.

"For this reason," he went on, "when the small, unpretentious parties at Army posts get into the newspapers, they seem to take on an importance they don't deserve. They're overplayed . . . exaggerated . . . glamorized from cocktails to nut cups until it's no wonder civilians get the idea high-powered partying is the regular course of affairs around an Army post. Fact is, nothing could be farther from the truth.

"There are parties," he continued, "plenty of them. "But they're comparatively simple affairs, planned merely to pay back obligations . . . which, according to Army etiquette, must be returned promptly.

"No, Gen. Craig hasn't issued any such order," repeated Col. Surles, "and probably never will. Persons connected with the Army understand the situation, and there's no recent development regarding it." So . . . that's that. Engagements of Army sons and daughters, weddings in Army circles, and parties reported without being overplayed, will appear in the newspapers as usual.

LORD AND LADY ASTOR have added another date to their Washington calendar. They will be guests of honor at a tea given by the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The Press Club, incidentally, will have as its honor guest today at luncheon, Joseph P. Kennedy, new United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's. In contrast to Thursday's party when only press women will be present, today's event will probably draw as many guests as members. Everybody wants at least a peep at the man who got the most coveted plum in the diplomatic pie. And most of the women in Washington have been buzzing about trying to find out all they can about pretty Mrs. Kennedy, the mother of nine children, who looks about as young as her eldest daughter.

Mrs. Kennedy, who isn't in town now, has lived here one year. She moved down with her family shortly after her husband was made head of the Maritime Commission. She was too busy with home and family to get about in society very much, so Washington knows little about her. In recent years she has spent her winters in Florida and her summers in Hyannisport, Cape Cod, Mass.

There's one woman here—Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard—who remembers Mrs. Kennedy back in the days when she was Rose Fitzgerald, prize pupil in the senior class of Dorchester (Mass.) High School. Rose was graduating the year Elizabeth Bates (Mrs. Stoddard) entered; but the fame of the upper classmen was well known in the lower classes, and Mrs. Stoddard recalls Rose as "the smartest girl in school . . . and one of the prettiest."

* * * *

SPEAKING OF MRS. STODDARD reminds me—she and her husband have as their house guest John Clark, who plays the doctor in "Room Service," current play at the National Theater viewed by scores of social notables last evening.

A Britisher, Mr. Clark first came to our shores with a leading role in "Monsieur Beaucaire." Since then, he has played a variety of shows on both sides of the Atlantic. He has known the Stoddards for many years, his friendship with Mrs. Stoddard stemming from the days when she was figuring in some important singing roles herself.

Austrian Envoy Entertains at Cocktail Party

The Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik entertained at a small, informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon in the handsome legation on Massachusetts avenue just beyond Sheridan Circle.

Mme. Prochnik received her guests in the drawing room, with its lovely furniture upholstered in delicate colors. She wore a long hostess gown in a hunter's green shade and a corsage of white orchids.

Pouring tea for a while was Frau Thomsen, vivacious wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy. Dr. Thomsen is spending a few days in New York on business.

Countess Roberti Among Those Present

Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, was an early arrival, wearing a magnificent silver fox cape over her black frock. Philip Broadmead, of the British Embassy; Hector Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy, and Laurence Bungardenu, of the Rumanian Legation, were other members of the Diplomatic Corps present.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cushman were accompanied by the latter's sister, Mrs. Haywood Newbold. The party was small enough so that most of the guests stood in the dining room, where many delicacies, including Austrian pastries, were served. Candles in silver holders flanked the centerpiece of flowers on the buffet.

Others there were Mrs. Mondell Gregg, all in black; Mrs. Sims Snow and Mrs. William T. Mann; Mrs. George Summerlin, jr.; Baron Mario Bucovich, and Wilhelm Eickhoff, Charge d'Affaires of the Danish Legation. Mr. Eickhoff is keeping bachelor quarters as his wife is still in Europe with the twins who were born recently to this popular couple.

Benjamin Plunket, of the British Embassy; Robert Webster, of the South African Legation; John Stonborough, whose home is in Austria; Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, and A. F. H. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, Secretary of The Netherlands Legation, were among the "extra men" present at the party.

Every Woman There Dressed in Black

Practically every woman there yesterday wore the ever present black. One of the most unusual frocks was that of Mrs. McKenney Mallan, which was black trimmed with gold braid on the jacket. With this she wore a fetching, close-fitting hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, William K. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Kunelt were others present. Ernest Schlatter, Attache of the Swiss Legation, came in late, having been host at a christening party for his young daughter, Zoe Anne Noel Schlatter.

Mr. Andrews Will Be Married

Mrs. Frank Asbury Mizener, of North East, Pa., and Winter Park, Fla., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mathilde Mizener, to Charles O. Andrews, jr., son of Senator and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, of Orlando, Fla., and Washington. The wedding will take place in March in Knowles Memorial Chapel, Winter Park.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

HEARTS AND FLOWERS in a big way will be the theme of the Thrift Shop Frolics February 12, it was decided yesterday at a committee meeting at the home of Miss Nancy Leiter on Dupont Circle.

"Since the party comes on Lincoln's birthday, grandmother thought it would be a good idea to have Lincoln the theme of the ball," said Miss Leiter yesterday. "But I decided he would be hard to build a dance around, so it's going to be a Valentine affair instead." "Grandmother" is Mrs. John R. Williams, head of the Thrift Shop and organizer of the frolics to raise money for her favorite charity.

Although it's sometimes like pulling teeth to get members of a committee of young women to offer to do any real work, Miss Leiter presided over the meeting yesterday with all the energy of her grandmother. She exhibited sketches of the costumes to be worn. These are to be red and white, and range from ballet dresses to Tyrolean shorts.

Mrs. James Hamilton (Gypsy) Lewis, wife of the Illinois Senator, will be there to tell fortunes, and there are to be games galore in the dining room of the Sulgrave Club. Decorations will carry out the red and white theme and a case of champagne to be auctioned off will add to the general interest.

The biggest moment of the evening is expected to be the singing of "The Lady Is a Tramp," by none other than Mitzi Green herself. The show, "Babes in Arms," will be in Washington that week and it is hoped that members of the cast can be lured to the frolics.

AMONG COMMITTEE MEMBERS there yesterday were Nora de With, daughter of the Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With, who is designing the posters; Miss Margot Garrett—she leaves soon for visits in New York and Boston; Betty Shouse, Ethel Worthington, Mrs. Herbert Stratford, Miss Louise Alexander, who is also working for the success of the President's Birthday Ball on Saturday; Mrs. Horace Peters, Alice Barry, who came in with Alex Rowan from a session of bowling; the Misses Martha and Virginia Bacon; Kitty DuBoise, Stellita Stapleton, Christine Long, Mary Wilson, Mary Wells and Mrs. Gale McLean.

Eleanor Flood, who was also present, is leaving at the end of the week for a brief stay in Florida.

SO SHE CAN UNDERSTAND what people mean when they talk about "martial law" and the "fiscal year," Florence Harris is attending Mannix Walker's foreign service school. A fellow pupil is Barbara Wright . . . Miss Harris has no intentions of trying for the foreign service, but simply wants to be well primed for heavier dinner table conversation around Washington . . . Miss Helen Davis, daughter of Dwight Davis, passed her written exams for the State Department and came up for the orals last week. Since, out of 400-odd candidates for the writtens, only a very small percentage came through, Miss Davis deserves a lot of credit, even though the department's unwritten law about not taking any more women may prevent her from getting in.

Trucco Nuptials Impel Flurry Of D. C. Parties

The approaching marriage of Miss Graciela Trucco to Fernando Illanes Benitez, Second Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, is the signal for a flurry of teas, cocktail affairs, and other entertainments.

The Chilean Ambasasdor, father of the bride-to-be, and his two other daughters, the Misses Marta and Rebeca Trucco, have sent out invitations for a dance on Friday evening, February 11, in honor of the betrothed couple. The party will take place at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Snodgrass will give a tea for Miss Trucco and her fiance tomorrow afternoon, and the Misses Jane and Junia Culbertson have cards out for a cocktail party on Sunday in honor of the couple. Miss Junia Culbertson will be one of the attendants in the wedding. Her father is William S. Culbertson, former Ambassador to Chile.

Meanwhile, the Ambassador has issued invitations to his daughter's wedding, which will take place February 18 at 4 o'clock at St. Matthew's Church. The ceremony will be followed by a large reception at the embassy.

After their marriage, Mr. Benitez and his future bride will sail for a honeymoon in Bermuda. From there they will go to Lima, where Mr. Benitez was recently transferred.

Dinners Arranged Here to Precede Friday Club Dance

A number of dinners are being planned to precede the Friday Evening Dancing Club this week at the Willard Hotel.

Maj. and Mrs. Parker West will entertained 18 guests that evening, taking them on to the dance. Their dinner will be in compliment to the Dominican Minister and Mme. Pastoriza. Others who will give dinners on Friday before the dance are Mrs. David Blair, Mrs. Frederic McKenney and Mrs. Ralph Church.

Maj. and Mrs. West also will give two dinners early in February. On February 9 they will entertain in honor of Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, and on the following evening, they will have a dinner in compliment to the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang.

News Women Hold 'At Home'

Cave-dwellers, wives of noted officials and a scattering of newspaper women met, and mingled, and enjoyed the "at home" yesterday given by the Newspaper Women's Club, at headquarters in The Admiral.

Miss Margaret Wade, as official hostess for the occasion, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the club. At the lace-covered tea table were Mrs. Perry S. Heath and Miss Katherine McKeiver. Flames of the four white candles flaking the big bouquet of white and red carnations in the center of the table, and the glow of a crackling, fire heightened the cozy atmosphere of the party.

Among the many guests there were Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, who arrived with her niece, Miss Margaret McKensie; Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Benton McMillin, Miss Victoria Emery, Mrs. S. W. Ferguson, Mrs. H. L. E. Johnson, Mrs. W. W. Coblentz, better known as Catherine Cate Coblentz, the author, and Miss Janet Richards.

Capital Music Lovers Attend Two Concerts in a Single Day

Mondays and musicales have been almost synonymous in Washington's social life this season. Come spring, the out-of-doors will beckon and debutantes and dowagers, diplomats and residential notables will find their fun elsewhere; but on a rainy winter day, there's nothing more satisfying than sitting cozily indoors and letting one's mind "wander to music," as one society matron expresses it.

That, anyway, was what a sizable number of notables had a chance to do yesterday. Shortly after 11 a. m., the regular Monday throng was crowding in the doors of the Mayflower for Mrs. Townsend's musicale. Yesterday afternoon, many of the same faces plus several others appeared at the candlelight concert at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. Between the two events, a number of music lovers lunched together and talked over the program they had just heard and the next one on their schedule.

Because of a cold, Mrs. Townsend had to miss her musicale yesterday morning, but despite her absence, the concert was one of the most successful of the season—with Ezio Pinza, Italian bass-barytone, and Orlando Barera, violinist, presenting a varied program. Later, the artists of the morning were guests of honor at a luncheon with Mr. Townsend as host. A number of other luncheon parties also followed the concert.

Mrs. Wallace Has Guests in Box

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, occupied the Presidential box at the concert. She was accompanied by Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. Vincent Harrington, Mrs. James Le Cron and Mrs. Fred Bierman. Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose had as her guests, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff and Mrs. Harry Ayres.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was glimpsed in the crowd; also Mrs. McCook Knox, accompanied by Miss Anne Squire; Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. John Sweeney, Miss Rebecca Wellington, Miss Ivy Bacon, in a black ensemble; Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, in a black caracul coat with a silver fox collar; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, in a black caracul coat with a small hat to match; Mrs. Jouett Shouse in a reddish suit with a long cape and a matching turban; Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, in a red dress and hat and a long fur cape.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich were ranking guests at Mr. Townsend's luncheon given for Mr. Pinza and Mr. Barera. Others in the party included the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With and Mlle. Nora van Haersma de With; the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch; the Marquis of Sant Orsola; Nobile Benedetto Capomazza dei Marchesi di Campolattaro, Count and Countess Guerino Roberti, Philip Broadmead and Leander McCormick-Goodhart.

Lady Fairhaven Is Luncheon Guest

Lady Fairhaven, of London, the former Miss Clara Rogers, and Lady Pauncefote, whose father was British Ambassador to this country, were also among the guests. Others at the luncheon were Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. C. C. Glover, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. Granger Blair, Miss Rebecca Wellington, Miss Margot Garrett, Miss Moira Archbold, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, George T. Summerlin, Robert Coe, H. Blackison Wilkins, Samuel Townsend, grandson of the host, Edwin McArthur and Hubert Giesen.

Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa, entertained at luncheon following the concert. Among other hostesses was Mrs. Charles J. Brand, whose party was given in honor of Fra Dieckhoff, wife of the German Ambassador, and whose guest list included Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea was another luncheon hostess, as were, also Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, and Mrs. Frank W. Mondell.

Later in the day—around 5 o'clock, to be exact—society braved the rainy weather to attend the candlelight concert, sponsored by the Washington Chamber Music Society at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich were in the distinguished gathering that heard the Pro Musica Quartet play the "Malapiero Rispetti e Strombatti" which was dedicated to Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. The program was presented by Frederich Dvonch, new concert master of the National Symphony Orchestra, Ralph Hersh, Jeno Sevely and William Brennand.

Nancy Hancock Wedding Feb. 28

Miss Nancy Hancock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Boyd Hancock, of Paris, Ky., has chosen February 28 as the date of her marriage to Douglas Farley Cox, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Cox, of Llewellyn Park, West Orange. The bride-to-be attended Foxcroft School in Middleburg, Va., later studied abroad, and is widely known in Washington.

The ceremony will take place in the Presbyterian Church at Paris. Miss Mary Elizabeth Clay, of that place, will be maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be the Misses Lucy Simms and Ann Terrill. Mrs. John Harris Clay will be matron of honor.

Harvey Clapp, of Baltimore, will be best man and the ushers will include Kenneth S. Walker, of New York; John T. Kipp, of Passaic, N. J.

Morton Curran, of Montclair, N. J.; Frank M. Cox, of New York, cousin of the prospective bridegroom; Charlton A. Clay, uncle of the bride-elect, and Arthur B. Hancock, jr., her brother.

A reception at the Hancock home will follow the ceremony.

Mr. Cox was graduated from St. George's School, Newport, R. I., and from Princeton.

Schlatters Give Party for Baby

The Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter held a christening party yesterday in honor of their young daughter, Zoe Anna Noel Schlatter. She was born on Christmas Eve.

About a dozen close friends witnessed the christening and 15 or 20 more came in afterward to celebrate over a cocktail or a cup of tea. The party was held at the Schlatter residence, 2230 California street.

Mme Schlatter was before her marriage Miss Zoe Patterson. Her father, the late Guillermo Patterson, was formerly Cuban Ambassador here.

Mrs. Stevens Hostess At Tea for Mrs. Paxton

Mrs. Cabot Stevens was hostess at a small informal tea yesterday to present Mrs. John Paxton, of Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. Paxton is the mother of Mrs. Vincent Miles and is the house guest of the latter at her Idaho avenue residence.

Women's Patriotic Units Meet Before Conference

Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary and Foreign Wars Group Prepare for Defense Parley Which Opens Today.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Preliminary meetings of various of the 40 women's patriotic organizations participating in the thirteenth annual Conference on National Defense which opens at the Mayflower today, have already inaugurated a busy schedule for hundreds of delegates.

Last night the auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, whose past national president, Mrs. Gladys Mooney, is chairman of the conference, held a banquet at the Mayflower, sponsored by the District of Columbia organization, headed by Mrs. Adelaide Grant. The affair was in honor of the national president, Mrs. Laurie Schertle, of Oakland, Calif., and was attended by national officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars as well as those of the auxiliary. The commander-in-chief, Scott P. Squyres, of Oklahoma City, who is to speak at the opening mass meeting of the conference, addressed dinner guests last night. He and members of his staff had just arrived from Columbus, Ohio, where they attended a State rally last week.

Grand Army Head Honored by D. U. V.

Dr. Overton Mennet, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, who arrived yesterday from Los Angeles, and Mrs. Mary Manning, national president of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War from Seattle, were guests of honor last night at a reception given by the national board at the headquarters of the D. U. V., 1326 Eighteenth street. In the receiving line also were Col. Russell C. Martin, past commander in chief; Mrs. Bertha Droz, of Mansfield, Ohio, national junior president; Mrs. Matilda D. Roberts, chairman of the board, here from Gary, Ind., and Miss Hazel Riley, of Chicago; Mrs. Clara G. Yenling, of Cleveland; Miss Clara Hoover and Mrs. Julia C. Phillips, of Chicago, all past presidents and board members.

From the reception at the national headquarters, they went to the Raleigh Hotel for installation of officers of the District of Columbia D. U. V. and a banquet in honor of the national president. Mrs. Manning will serve as secretary for the conference.

During the day group meetings were held by V. F. W. Auxiliary members. Mrs. Schertle called a conference of State presidents, secretaries and treasurers in her suite yesterday morning. Among State presidents attending were Mrs. Christine Tew, of Virginia; Mrs. Jane M. Sparks, Delaware; Mrs. Leones C. Barnette, Alabama; Alice Mooney, Kansas, who is no relation to the national president despite having the same name; Clara Wickert, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Ida R. Keller, Ohio; Mrs. Betty C. Hargraves, Michigan; Mrs. Helen M. Nelson, Rhode Island; Mrs. Josephine A. Coleman, Illinois; Mrs. Bertha Nan Carroll, Missouri; Mrs. Ella M. Brennan, Connecticut; Mrs. Marie Wulff, New York; Mrs. Isabelle Wylie, North Carolina, and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Riddle, New Hampshire.

Mrs. Gladys Mooney, who, in addition to being a past president of her organization, is chairman of Americanism, called a conference of State chairmen of that department yesterday to discuss plans for reporting to the States the program outlined at the conference and reaching the public through radio and press.

"People are aroused as they have not been before to the importance of our national defense," said Mrs. Rooney, "largely because of the situation in the Far East, and we want to carry into every section of the country the findings of this conference."

Legion Auxiliary Holds Ceremony

The District of Columbia Department of the American Legion Auxiliary last night met for the official visitation of Mrs. Benjamin F. Adams, of New Hampshire, national vice president for the Eastern division. The program was in the Washington Hotel with Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president, presiding.

Margaret Wilding and Barbara Wells, both 5, led the juniors of the District department in review before the national junior chairman, Mrs. Willis C. Reed, of Oklahoma. Little girls as well as the older ones wore gold-lined blue sating capes and service caps with their white dresses. Adding color to the scene were the red and white uniforms of members of the Eight and Forty and the gold and blue uniforms worn by American Legion members present.

Lieut. Thomas Mason, jr., department commander of the Legion, welcomed guests preceding the address by Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, national president of the Legion Auxiliary.

Others on the program were Mrs. Adams; Fred Fraser, Chef de Chemin de Fer, and John McCabe, Grande Chef de Gare of the Forty and Eight; Mrs. Mary Haws, Le Chapeau National, and Mrs. John McCabe, Chapeau Departemental, of the Eight and Forty; Mrs. Mary E. Killeen, past department president of the Auxiliary, who presented citations to the Agriculture, Jasper and Treasury units; Myron Miller, of Kansas, national chairman of legislation, and Mrs. Mary Roberts Klaphaak, department chairman; Mrs. Ernest G. Rarey, of Ohio, national chairman of Americanism, and Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, department chairman; Mrs. Eben P. Keen, of Pennsylvania, national chairman of defense for the Auxiliary; J. O'Connor Roberts, national chairman for the Legion; Miss Clara Humphries, department chairman; John R. Quinn, past national commander and B. W. Gearhart, past department commander for California, who talked on Los Angeles and the national convention.

Music was by the United States Marine Band Orchestra, which played preceding the program and accompanied "The Star Spangled Banner," which was led by Mrs. Estelle Hunt Dean. Mrs. Dean also sang, accompanied by Miss Pauline Grant.

The United Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary held a council meeting yesterday and Sunday at national headquarters here, with the national president, Mrs. Mary A. McGauley, of New York, presiding. A breakfast was held Sunday at the Mayflower, with Rice W. Means, of Colorado, and Mrs. Means heading the special guests. Others, in addition to the national president, included Capt. and Mrs. William L. Mattox, Washington; Patrick J. Callam, quartermaster general of the Spanish War Veterans; Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, national president of the National Patriotic Council; Mrs. Louise Williams, national secretary; Mrs. Virginia P. Murray, national treasurer; Mrs. Anna Neagle, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Maimie Schmidt, of Georgia; Mrs. Anna K. Juneau, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Jessie Boothe Perry, and Mrs. Violet B. King, both of Illinois, and Mrs. Elizabeth McNamara, of Massachusetts, all past national presidents.

State department presidents who attended and will be here during the defense conference include Mrs. Pansy Benzena of Alabama; Mrs. Lucy Edwards, Connecticut; Mrs. Myrtle Moxley of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Della Neal, Florida; Mrs. Willie Stewart, Georgia; Mrs. Ada Duffy, Illinois; Mrs. Ella Bell, Indiana; Mrs. Elsie McMichael, Iowa; Mrs. Margaret Murray, Massachusetts; Mrs. Clara Wierenga, Michigan; Mrs. Ruby Blanch, Maryland; Mrs. Catherine McNeely, New Jersey; Mrs. Emma Stobbe, New York; Mrs. Cora Maybery, North Carolina; Mrs. Eva Buchanan, Ohio; Mrs. Cora Bitzenberger, Rhode Island; Mrs. Eva Knox, South Carolina; Mrs. Jennie Shackleford, Virginia; Mrs. Minerva Lang, West Virginia; Mrs. Myrtle Jones, Wisconsin; Mrs. Ethel Crossfield, Kansas; Mrs. Theresa Buckley, Maine; Mrs. Emma Bill, Minnesota; Mrs. Anna Maaz, New Hampshire, and Mrs. Margaret Mackey, Pennsylvania.

The conference will open today with a pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery, followed by a tea and a mass meeting at which the Hon. James W. Gerard will discuss the American philosophy of government. At the mass meeting there will be singing led by Miss Margaret Daum of the Metropolitan Opera Association. At the dinner tomorrow evening there will be two solos by Miss Hollace Shaw, coloratura soprano, from California.

D. A. R. to Sponsor 'Junior Assembly' As First in Capital

A junior assembly tea dance, sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be held in the Italian garden of the Mayflower Hotel Saturday from 4 to 6:30 p. m. This will be the first social affair for the younger set of the Sons of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the American Revolution to be held in Washington.

THE RUBINSTEIN CLUB is giving its annual concert at the Willard Hotel tonight under the direction of Claude Robeson, who has led the chorus for more than 20 years. Adele Robinson Bush, who will be at the piano, has accompanied the group for 14 years.

The Rubenstein Club has built up traditions in its 30 years, and its concerts are always events which attract those interested in music. As is its custom, the club will include a Rubinstein composition on the program—this time, "Water Nymph," with harp accompaniment by Sylvia Meyer, of the National Symphony Orchestra. Miss Meyer will also accompany Tschaikowsky's "Love and Light," and will play a group of harp solos. John Rockwood is to be barytone soloist.

Mrs. Leon Truesdell, president of the club, is one of the newer members, but it has many who have belonged for years. Among them are Mrs. Mary Bowen, Mrs. Mayne R. Coe, Mrs. Katherine M. Ellis, Mrs. Margaret C. Buell, who is a former president and now an honorary president; Mrs. Everil W. Murphy, Ruth Burr Roberts, Miss Charlotte Seiffert, Miss Bertha Rolson, Mrs. J. Ethel Richards and Miss Rachel Lang. Honorary president in addition to Mrs. Buell are Mrs. Hobart Brooks, Mrs. Appoline Blair and Mrs. Eulalie Rheen Rowe.

The concert will be at the Willard, where Rubinstein programs have been given for years.

THE BOOKS AND THEIR MAKERS' CLASS of the Y. W. C. A. will be received tonight at 7 o'clock by Abel Warshawnsky, noted painter, at the Raleigh Hotel. Miss Alice Hutchins Drake is leader of the class, and has announced that members may bring guests.

AND, speaking of books, Mrs. Earl Trager, of the American Association of University Women, is now engaged in writing one on travel in our national parks, to be illustrated with beautiful color plates from some of the pictures her husband took on their trip last summer. Mr. Trager is chief of the naturalist division of the National Park Service.

Two Sororities Join in Benefit

The Washington Alumnae Association of Alpha Delta Pi and Chi Omega will give a joint benefit performance of the Civic Theate production, "The Distaff Side," at the Wardman Park Theater tomorrow evening. Proceeds will be used for the national philanthropies of the two organizations.

Chi Omega sponsors the national achievement award, presented annually to the outstanding woman in one of the following fields: Public affairs, the professions, education, business and finance, the arts and letters.

The selection is made by a committee including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and last year the award was given to Miss Katharine Cornell at the White House. Chi Omega also maintains a service fund, the interest from which is used for publication of books on research.

Alpha Delta Pi awards annually two graduate fellowships valued at $600 each in recognized schools of day nursery training. These fellowships are open to any woman whether a member of a fraternity or not. This year the fellows are studying at the University of Texas and the University of Toronto. An undergraduate scholarship is also given each year to Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., where Alpha Delta Pi was founded May 15, 1851. Alpha Delta Pi also presented Wesleyan College with a memorial fountain recently on the occasion of the college's centennial celebration.

Mrs. Francis LeSourd, of Alpha Delta Pi, and Mrs. Gertrude Phillips, of Chi Omega, are joint chairmen in charge of the benefit.

'Big Stick' Use to Deter Fascists Is Urged Before Club Federation

Wife of Post's Publisher Says That Democracies Must Act and Calls for Sharp Moral Distinctions and End of 'Sophistry.'

Democracies of the world must act to meet the menace of autocracies to our culture and institutions, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post, told the District Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday morning, addressing its monthly meeting at the Roosevelt Hotel.

"The opportunism and the unblushing villainy of fascism is so abhorrent and so repulsive that Americans are prone to look around to find excuses for such depravity," she said, "but it is high time we dropped all such weak sophistry and began once more to make sharp biblical distinctions between good and evil; for fascism is evil, pure and unadulterated.

"How long are we going to remain spineless in the face of such a challenge; must such moral obloquy really be accepted Can international decency be restored to the world only through military force? Surely the world has not yet sunk to such depths, and there is yet time to meet these shameless assertions with an equally vigorous reply, based upon morality, upon social dignity, and upon deep political and religious conviction.

"Net nobody suppose that the democracies of the world are ineffective unless they are willing to go to war. If we are fully armed, these marauders will think twice before they incur the displeasure of the wealthiest and most powerful nation in the world. Speak softly, but carry a big stick,' is as good a policy now as when Theodore Roosevelt first used it."

Mrs. Meyer was introduced by Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the federation, who presided at the meeting.

The morning session also included a discussion of the proposed anti-vivisection measure now coming up for hearings which was presented by Miss Elizabeth Howry, of the Animal Defense Society. The federation will not take action until a representative of the group favoring vivisection has been given opportunity to present the other side of the question.

Mrs. Alfred L. Fleming, of the education committee of the federation, brought up the subject of the boycott on silk and called attention to the fact that shipments of scrap iron from this country to Japan, which have been going on over a long period, had more serious bearing on the war than anything American women could do in buying or not buying silk stockings.

Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, first vice president of the federation, and Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison announced plans for the annual bridge which will be given February 28, the date of the next regular meeting. It will be at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Eastern Star Sets Initiation

Six Candidates to Be Admitted at Lebanon Chapter Meeting.

Initiation of six candidates will take place this evening at the regular meeting of Lebanon Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at Masonic Temple, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

The chapter is deep in plans for a big dance and card party to be held at the Hotel Shoreham, Friday night, February 25. The committee arranging for this annual event is headed by Raymond B. Hutchinson, with Mrs. Mabelle Stott acting as assistant to the chairman and as secretary of the committee. Mrs. Stott has charge of tickets, and reservations for the cards are in the hands of Mrs. Augusta Thompson, past matron of the chapter.

Naomi Chapter will hold its regular meeting this evening. The worthy matron, Anne Guilford, has named the following committee chairmen: Auxiliary home board, Mrs. Ruth T. Lawrence; chapter, Mrs. Lorraine D. Proudly; educational, Mrs. Grace Delaney; endowment, Mrs. Elma C. Jenkins.

The chapter members will join Washington Centennial Chapter in a reception at the Willard Hotel, January 31, in honor of the new grand matron and patron, Mrs. Helen D. Robbins and Harry J. Schmidt.

Naomi Chapter, of Bethesda, Md., has installed as its new officers for the year Carolyn P. Baldwin, matron; George W. Laird, patron; Sarah E. Scott, associate matron; Hugh Myers, associate patron; Lois E. Hartman, conductress; Elsie Lenore, associate conductress; Gertrude Bovet, treasurer; Rose M. Coombs, secretary; Lillian K. Riley, chaplain; Viola Jett, marshall; Virginia Lee Sager, organist; Louise Aldrich, Ada; Margaret O. Hyson, Ruth; Susie Kershner, Esther; Carolyn Fell, Martha, and Margaret G. Holt, Electa. The next meeting will be Wednesday of this week.

Mrs. Rose L. Hidde, worthy matron, announces there will be initiation at the next meeting of Columbia Chapter.

The Officers Club has elected the following officers for the coming year: Mrs. Nellie Gordon, president; Mrs. Eleanor Bartram, vice president; Mrs. Alma Morn, secertary-treasurer.

Mrs. Harry Bell Heads District Fire Auxiliary

Mrs. Harry Bell was installed as president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the District of Columbia Fire Department last night at the organization's meeting in the board room of the District Building. She succeeds Mrs. Thomas Baber, who has served for the past year.

Other new officers are Mrs. A. J. Lipski, senior vice president; Mrs. William Cameron, junior vice president; Mrs. Charles Weitzel, secretary; Mrs. Margaret Ratcliffe, treasurer. Mrs. Ernest William Howard acted as installing officer.

The outgoing president was presented with a diamond dinner ring by the members of the auxiliary and flowers were given to the new president. A banquet honoring the new officers will be given next Monday night at the Lafayette Hotel.

Woman Democrats Hear Miss Richards

Across a table bright with jonquils and narcissi Miss Janet Richards sketched a gloomy word picture of the outstanding menaces to peace in the world, at the Monday luncheon at the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday.

"If you want to keep abreast of conditions watch what is going on in South and Central America," Miss Richards suggested.

Pointing to one of the outstanding dangers to world peace as the overpopulation in European and Asiatic countries with those countries determined to find an outlet for this surplus, Miss Richards said that colonization is now going on, not through aggressive force but through infiltration. "Look at the number of German immigrants coming into Brazil, the Japanese being admitted into Mexico and Chile and all under perfectly legal immigration laws," she said and suggested that this is one way of outwitting without encroaching upon the Monroe doctrine.

A. A. U. W. Set To Sponsor New Studies

Course Sought to Train Girls as Food Service Executives.

Miss Nienburg Points Out Need for Professional Training.

Courses designed to train young women to be food service executives will be instituted in one of the colleges of Washington if plans of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women materialize. The board of directors, headed by Mrs. Richard Hogue, the branch president, yesterday adopted a resolution presented by Miss Bertha Nienburg, supporting the work of her committee in that direction.

Miss Nienburg is chairman of the committee on the legal and economic status of women, which has conducted a survey on vocational opportunities for young women of the District who are college graduates.

There are comparatively few openings in the professional field, the survey revealed. In clerical and retail positions, the college graduate, although her training equips her to be of more value to her employer than the girl who has not had the advantage of the four years' additional training, is paid no more as a result of it—making her education of no value from the standpoint of her earning power, Miss Nienburg pointed out.

The food industry, with 826 cafeterias, restaurants and tea rooms in the city, is one of the largest in Washington and almost equals the business done in New York city. The survey, said Miss Nienburg, showed a need for food service executives—young women to take charge of different departments in large eating houses—but that the graduates of home economics courses offered by colleges here are not prepared for such responsibility. It requires a specialized training which only certain colleges offer. As Washington is such an important food center the committee sees opportunity for college-trained women in that field.

The resolution pledged the board of the local A. A. U. W. to sponsor the efforts of the committee "to bring about the establishment of suitable vocational and liberal arts educational courses in one of the local colleges to prepare women to become food service executives."

Announcement of the plan was made yesterday at a luncheon given at the clubhouse with members of the press among the guests. The board also announced an all-day and evening bridge party to be sponsored February 15 for the benefit of its Latin-American fellowship fund. The fellowship for which the Washington branch of the A. A. U. W. is responsible is one of several offered through the national association and given to graduate women of the Latin-American countries for study in the United States.

Mrs. Frank Smith is chairman of arrangements for the bridge. The list of patronesses is headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, wife of the chief of the Division of Latin-American Affairs of the State Department.

If there is an overflow of players at the clubhouse, several of the club members plan to entertain friends at their homes.

Appalachian Trail Club To Hold Election Tonight

The Potomac Appalachian Trail Club will hold its annual meeting for reports and election of officers tonight at 8, in the Pen Women's Studio, Grafton Hotel. This is the celebration of 10 years' activity, during which the club has made and now maintains 260 miles of Appalachian Trail in South Mountain, Pa., and the Blue Ridge, used regularly by Washingtonians.

The president, Myron H. Avery, will announce that two new stone shelters are available in the George Washington National Forest.

• • • •

Mrs. James F. Frenzel, of Carmel, Ind., who formerly made her home in Washington, has returned for a visit and has taken a suite at the Wardman Park. She is accompanied by her son, James F. Frenzel, jr.

• • • •

Dr. Abram Simon, who with Mrs. Simon has recently returned from a trip to Chicago and Atlantic City, will resume his Wednesday morning book reviews tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel. He will speak on Thamos Mann's "Freud, Goethe and Wagner."

Hadassah Plans Luncheon.

A member-bring-a-member luncheon and bridge will be held by the Washington Chapter of Hadassah next Monday, at 12:30 at The Fairfax, Twenty-first and Massachusetts avenue northwest. Members may take this opportunity to earn their donor banquet ticket by bringing new members to this luncheon and be guests of Hadassah for the afternoon. Only 70 reservations can be accepted therefore members are making them early, with Mrs. Philip Silverstone.

Chinese Troops Destroy Japanese Mill; Damrosch Turns Actor

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

Japanese Mill Goes Up In Smoke

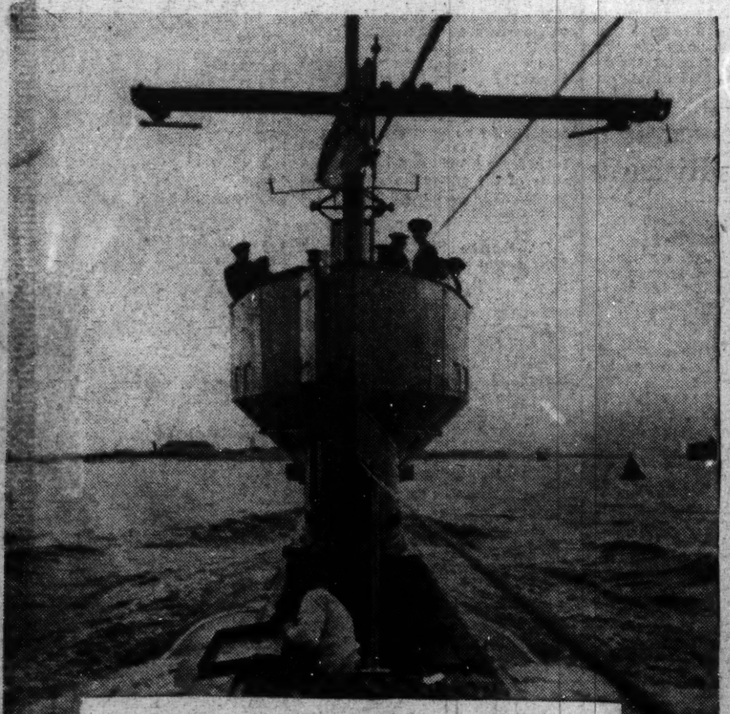
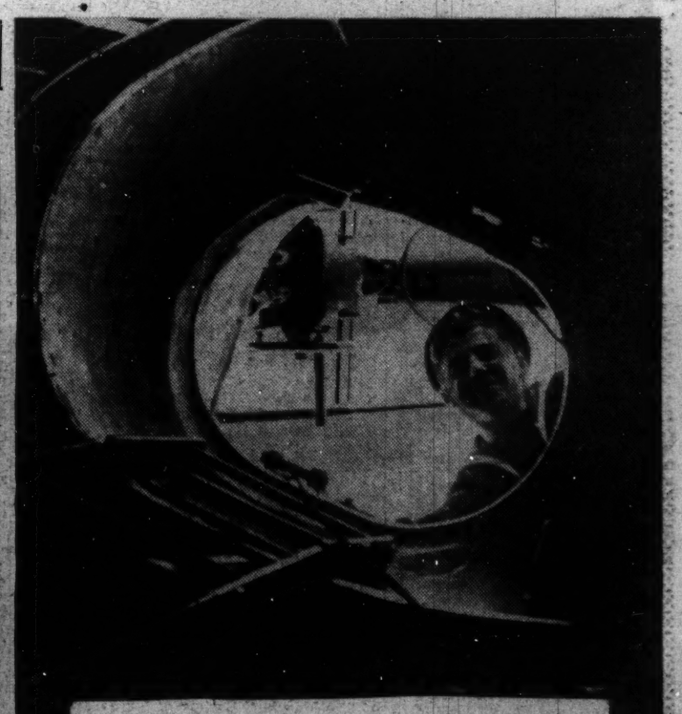
Government by Space Rules Life on Submarines



1 The submarine as a weapon of war is of utmost importance. With the aid of a few underwater craft, a foe can cut a nation's shipping lines and limit its food and military supplies. But life on a submarine is by necessity a cramped existence. A sailor is shown stowing the hawser aboard a British sub.

2 Meals are taken amidst machinery, tools, oil, and electrical equipment in quarters which also serve as sleeping quarters, as the folded bunks show above. The hardships are great and even more so are the dangers, which rank second only to those met in military aviation. In spite of it all, submarine schools receive more applicants than can be placed. Only a chosen few are able to find adventure aboard a submarine.



Wide World Photos.

3 There's not much room for a fat man on board. This open conning tower shows how small the entrance is. The modern subs are larger than those developed in the World War, can cruise great distances and be stationed at points far from their bases.

For many Washingtonians' life begins at 5 o'clock . . . Desks are cleared off, and in no American city, except perhaps in Hollywood, is the cocktail hour more religiously observed.

At the clubs the retired gaffers of the Army, Navy and diplomatic service are drinking a ceremonial highball, discussing the latest tidbit in the Army and Navy Journal, reminiscing about President Arthur or Admiral Dewey.

Orchestra Drive Set For Feb. 23 to Mar. 6

Miss Alice J. Clapp and Harold A. Brooks were elected to the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association at a meeting yesterday at the Carlton Hotel. Miss Clapp is an honorary vice president of the association and will retain that post. Brooks is vice president of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

A campaign to raise a sustaining fund to meet expenses of the orchestra for the 1938-39 season will be conducted from February 23 to March 6. L. Corrin Strong, member of the board, will be chairman of the campaign committee.

House Votes Annual Test For D. C. Cars

Bill That Passed Senate Provided Inspection Twice Yearly.

Checking Brakes, Tires, Other Details Planned as Safety Move.

Mandatory annual inspection of all motor vehicles licensed in Washington as a curb on traffic hazards was approved by the House yesterday.

The measure passed the Senate with a semiannual provision. It was amended on motion of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois. The House bill now goes back to the Senate for acceptance of the change or for a conference.

Dirksen said motorists associations held that the District Department of vehicles and traffic and the Police Department would be unable to inspect all Washington motor cars twice a year at the start.

The measure would set up testing stations at which all registered District motor vehicles will be tested with particular regard to brakes, lights, steering apparatus, tires and the like.

The auto owners will finance the project by paying $1 for the first year and 50 cents a year thereafter.

A bill to regulate barber shops by setting up a licensing board also was passed by the House. It now goes to the Senate.

Earlier in the day the Judiciary sub-committee of the House District Committee held a public hearing on the bill to set up a court of claims in the Municipal Court.

Opponents of the measure, which has passed the Senate, were heard. Proponents will be given a hearing at at 10:30 a. m. Friday.

The majority of the five members of the sub-committee indicated approval of the purposes of the proposal, sponsored by Judge Nathan Cayton.

Those who testified yesterday against the bill were Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and Robert J. Whiteford, lawyer.

Seal argued that the bill "takes in too much territory," while Whiteford insisted that there is no necessity for the small claims court, which would settle claims of $50 or less with a minimum of judicial procedure.

Whiteford said that the Municipal Court keeps up with its calendar and that, therefore, there is no delay in hearing cases.

The sub-committee, of which Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, is chairman, heard Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, speak in favor of a bill to exempt the Society of the Cincinnati's proposed Washington museum from taxation.

Sub-committee members indicated they would favor the plan so long as no admission charges are made by the society.

Capt. Chester Wells Again Elected to Head D. C. Scouts

Capt. Chester Wells was re-elected president of the District of Columbia Council of the Boy Scouts of America last night at the annual meeting and election of officers of the organization at the Willard Hotel.

Other officers elected at the meeting included Dr. Paul Bartsch, vice president; R. A. Van Orsdel, vice president; Dr. Camp Stanley, vice president; Ernest H. Daniel, treasurer; William B. Willard, assistant treasurer; John Rowland Hill, assistant treasurer; Dr. Stanley, scout commissioner, and Linn C Drake, assistant secretary.

Four persons, Paul T. Hannen, W. C. Westlake, F. S. Taylor and Dr. Stanley, were awarded silver beaver medals for distinguished service to the organization during the past year.

Following the yearly reports of council officers, John C. Merriam, president of Carnegie Institute, addressed members on the subject of Scouts in the outdoors and congratulated the council on its accomplishments during the year.

Society of Natives Lauds D. C. Police, Urges More Funds

Commendation for the superintendent of police, and a request for enlarging the District Police Force were voted lasf night by the Society of Natives of the District, at the Washington Club.

The resolution, presented by Etta Taggart, leader in the suffrage movement in Washington, said: "The society believes that had the unfortunate voteless Washingtonians been represented in the United States Senate and the House of Representatives, these alarming conditions would never have existed."

The group voted that Congress be asked to make an appropriation in the 1939 budget to increase the police force.

Dr. James Allen Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association outlined plans for a fight on crime.

The society elected to membership Earl Godwin, Edgar C. Portlow and Mrs. S. T. Ansell. A musical program was given by Miss Elizabeth Gates and Miss Carolyn Schulte.

Washington Board of Trade Is Host to Newspapermen at Mayflower

tonomy now granted local educational institutions.

"3. The District's administrative machinery should be reorganized in the interests of economy and efficiency.

"4. A civil service system for the local government should be established by law."

Meyer pointed out to his large audience at the Mayflower that behind most of the other local issues "looms the dilemma of adjusting the fiscal relations between the District and the Federal Governments in a way which will be fair to both."

With the reminder that "the modern way of settling disputes is through arbitration," the speaker suggested appointment of "a permanent fiscal relations committee consisting of one representative of the Treasury, one representative of the District government and a disinterested expert to be appointed, for example, by the United States District Court for Washington."

Asserting that the fiscal relations issue would "thus be relegated to the background," Meyer predicted that "Congress would be much more inclined to approve budgets and tax programs formulated in the District Building, in accordance with the needs and revenue producing capacities of Washington."

The "chief problem," in this "community that cannot vote," Meyer averred, is to formulate a sound, constructive program of civic betterment and "send it to Congress with the support of all Washington behind it."

He assured his audience that "we are working for those objectives in our editorial columns" and "once Congress realizes that Washingtonians are interested in doing their share, there will be sympathy and active support from the Hill and the White House."

Insisting that "it is the function of all official and unofficial groups interested in good government, to make the city a good place in which to live from every point of view," the speaker said that "we like to think of Washington as one of the world's most beautiful cities."

"Yet those of us who live here," he stated, "know that there is another side of Washington that we do not like to parade before visitors.

"We are forced to admit that the mortality rate of this, our National Capital, is one of the worst in the Nation.

"Our shame is equally deep as we confess to crime conditions that, on a population basis, rival the Chicago of Al Capone."

After referring to "the daily automobile toll," Meyer declared that "we would like to forget, but cannot, that slum conditions in the shadow of some of our most magnificent architectural glories, are as dismal in squalor, as deadly from a health standpoint, as primitive in living conditions, as any architectural eyesore on the American scene.

"Despite excellent work by hampered authorities, child delinquency is a growing menace in this beautiful Washington. Municipal hospital conditions are antiquated and far behind the facilities of other cities of equal population."

Meyer added that "inadequate police manpower and equipment made a gangster and robber paradise, ironically enough, in J. Edgar Hoover's home town."

He declared that "a Washington newspaper must serve this community intelligently and courageously in working for the health, happiness and prosperity of its citizens. For a newspaper is accepted as an important part of community life only to the degree in which it contributes in working for the welfare of the whole city."

With the assertion that the press "will reflect the forces that have created it," Sir Willmott emphasized his belief that the quality of newspapers largely depends on the demands of their readers, and on "the number of men who enter newspaper work with the thought that they are performing a public service."

Touching the union question as it relates to newspapers, Sir Willmott said that "when we think of the objection of publishers to a closed shop, we newspapermen ask if, little by little, there has not already come into existence a virtually closed shop for newspaper publishers?" It costs a great deal of money to start a newspaper, he added.

He asserted, however, that newspapers "are reasonably free, because they are economically independent. When economic independence is denied them, they fail in political independence."

Expressing "grave dubiety as to whether the food provided by the modern newspaper is not too strong for the digestion of the youthful reader," Sir Willmott also deplored "the sharp, shallow, inconsecutive sort of modern mind which prefers the article to the book; the paragraph to the article, and ends by preferring the headline to the paragraph."

At the business meeting preceding the principal addresses, the Board of Trade heard brief talks by John S. Bleecker, jr., president of the Junior Board of Commerce; Victor Sadd, of the Washington field office, Social Security Board, and Clarence Miller, chairman of the aviation committee of the Board of Trade.

Gravelly Point "is the place where the airport for the National Capital should be located," Miller argued, declaring that the present airport "cannot be made large enough." He advocated, however, that immediate improvements be made at Washington-Hoover field "in the interests of safety."

A resolution was unanimously adopted, offering the "affectionate congratulations and best wishes" of the Board of Trade to Theodore W. Noyes on his eightieth birthday. He was elected honorary life member of the board.

Guests of honor at the meeting, which was designated "Press Night," included national and District officials, executives of the National Press Club and Washington newspapers and radio stations, and business leaders.

Among them were: J. Austin Latimer, special assistant to the Postmaster General and assistant to the administrator of the USHA; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen; Harold Brayman, president of the National Press Club, and Charles O. Gridley, former president; Frank B. Noyes, retiring president of the Associated Press and president of the Evening Star; Milo Thompson, chief of the Washington bureau of the Associated Press, and Frederic William Wile, news commentator.

Edward F. Colladay, head of the Board of Trade, appealed for support of the President's Birthday Ball campaign against infantile paralysis.

Odier, Death-Gang Target, Once Ran Hotel in Capital

Pierre Andre Odier, reported to have been a prospective victim of Eugene Weidman, the modern Bluebeard upon whom French police recently blamed at least six murders, was once manager of the Senate Hotel in Washington, it was learned yesterday.

According to Odier's divorced wife, Mrs. G. W. Waite, of University Park, Md., he came here in 1927 to conduct an importing business. He lived at the Senate Hotel, owned by Mrs. Waite's father, Guy McCord.

Understanding Of Relief Setup Asked by Dodge

Private Agencies Can't Begin to Meet General Burden, Chest Group Told.

A plea for greater public understanding of the relationship between public relief and the programs of family welfare and rehabilitation carried on by private agencies was voiced last night by Clarence Phelps Dodge, retiring president of the Community Chest.

Speaking before an audience of 400 gathered in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium, at the annual Chest meeting, Dodge declared that "general relief is a burden so great that if all the funds now raised by all the private agencies were used for relief, they would meet only about 5 per cent of the need."

A great volume of complaints directed against Community Chests in Washington and elsewhere, he said, results from belief in some quarters that private agencies are equipped to dispense relief on the scale demanded by present economic conditions.

"Until the Government has a definite program to handle relief as a permanent need—thus taking the relief problem out of the emergency field—there will continue to be uncertainty and ineffectiveness in the handling of relief throughout the land . . . and just so long will the invaluable social services which our agencies are daily and hourly rendering be jeopardized by destructive criticism."

Emphasizing that the Chest is primarily the "fiscal agent" for its member agencies, Herbert L. Willett, jr., director, outlined the functions of the central organization and outstanding aspects of its service during 1937.

The fall campaign for funds resulted in a "remarkably fine record," he said, "in view of problems created by the business recession and in comparison with other Chest cities.

"But it still is only 91.67 per cent of the goal, and while that may be a fine passing mark in school it is not a good grade when people who need help are the losers. Every dollar of the goal was honestly and urgently needed, and, indeed, a very good case could have been made out for asking for at least $300,000 more."

Expert Avers Group Health Will Prosper

Harding Says Physicians' 'Hysterical' Fight Will Not Block Plan.

Dr. T. Swann Harding, writer on sociology and economics, told members of the Women's Democratic National Council last night that "the emotional antipathy of the medical profession will not prevent the rise of an organization to carry out group health."

Harding was one of the speakers in a three-cornered discussion held at the council's headquarters, 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest, by leading exponents of State medicine, group health insurance and the present system of medical practice.

Presenting the case for State medicine, Harding referred to the doctor in private practice today as "an economic anachronism" and asserted that present conditions of practice were "medical anarchy." For the physician, he said, State medicine would mean regular pay, the privilege of retirement pensions and a practice dictated by the patient's need and not by his ability to pay. He pointed out that advantages of the system to the patient would include a permanent record of his medical history and the "scientific" choice of a physician.

Dr. A. B. Bennett, Washington specialist and fellow of the American Medical Association, argued that previous experiments with group health insurance have failed, that the method would break down in an epidemic and that if an employed person who subscribed to the insurance plan should lose his job he would have neither the benefit of the insurance nor the money which he would ordinarily have saved to meet the emergency of sickness.

U. S. Health Plan Predicted.

New York, Jan. 24 (AP). — An "American plan of medical practice," to substitute for proposed "State medicine," which many other countries have already established, was predicted today by Morris Fishbein, M. D., spokesman of the American Medical Association.

He spoke at a meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine. First steps toward the American plan, he said, were taken recently by the board of trustees of the American Medical Association. This was to stimulate development of the co-operative medical services which already have started in many American communities.

The co-operative services include care of those unable to pay and of those who can pay a small amount. Hundreds of such plans, Dr. Fishbein said, have been reported to the American Medical Association.

Copeland Offers New Airport Bill

Senator Copeland yesterday introduced a measure providing for improvement of Washington Airport by closing of Military road, which now crosses the field.

The new measure, similar to that vetoed by President Roosevelt shortly after the close of the last regular session of Congress, directs that the air terminal pay $25,000 to Arlington County to pay for the road.

It does not authorize lease of approximately 55 acres of the Federal Agricultural Farm to the airport, or the filling of the lagoon on the edge of the landing field, as proposed in the measure which failed to receive Mr. Roosevelt's approval.

Senate Body Favors Civil Service Quiz

Ellender Predicts Action as Committee Backs His Resolution.

Audit Group Now Must Pass on Request for $10,000 Study.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, last night confidently predicted that the Senate will conduct an investigation of the operation of the civil service and classification acts after the Senate Civil Service Committee had reported favorably his resolution.

"Most of the Senators feel the way I do about it," he said. "They want either to see a real merit system in operation, or they want the whole thing discarded and to return to the spoils system."

The anti-lynching filibuster, Ellender admitted, may delay the inquiry.

Like most Senate investigations, the fate of the Ellender resolution now largely rests with the Senate Audit and Control Committee, which must pass on the recommendation that $10,000 be authorized for the inquiry.

A favorable report on the resolution was filed in the Senate yesterday by Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee after he had made a poll of the committee.

The committee recommended that the resolution be amended to provide for an investigating committee of five instead of three, and that the $10,000 be authorized.

"Your committee believes that the desirability of an investigation of this nature will be readily apparent to the members of Congress who are daily approached by civil service employes who charge superiors with discrimination, favoritism, and other violations of the purpose and intent of the civil service law," the report stated.

A two-fold inquiry was recommended, covering:

1. The extent to which discrimination is practiced by appointing and supervisory officials with respect to appointments, promotions, transfers, reinstatements, disciplinary action, and allocation of positions in the Government service.

2. The adequacy of the opportunity for impartial hearing given to employes who are discriminated against with regard to such matters.

The committee stated that evidence submitted "indicated there has grown up within the civil service a clique of 'bureaucratic czars,' who, while abhorring 'party politics,' have worked out a system of personal politics, whereby personal promotions and salary increases are traded back and forth and their friends and relatives are appointed, transferred and promoted in complete defiance of the civil service laws."

"The worst enemy of effective government and a real merit system is a secret group of this kind responsible to no one and chiefly interested only in personal advancement," the committee said.

"If these charges are true, and the voluminous evidence presented to your committee convinces them that in a very large number of cases they are true, then steps should be taken to correct these practices if an effective and unbiased merit system is to be continued in our Government.

"If they are not true, the shadow of suspicion which has been cast upon these officials charged with the administration of the civil service law and classification act will be removed and the public and Congress can go forward with renewed confidence in the efficiency of the civil service method."

'Room Service' Hits New High For Laughter

Swiftly-Paced Comedy Is Hilariously Greeted at the National.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"ROOM SERVICE." George Abbott presents the comedy in three acts by John Murray and Allen Boretz, directed by Mr. Abbott, with settings by Cirker and Robbins. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Sasha Smirnoff	Michael Dalmatoff
Gordon Miller	Reed Brown, jr.
Joseph Gribble	Fleming Ward
Harry Binion	James Lane
Feker Englund	Nat Cantor
Christine Marlowe	Mary Cheffey
Leo Davis	Clinton Sundberg
Hilda Manney	Patricia Palmer
Gregory Wagner	Matt Briggs
Simon Jenkins	Marshall Bradford
Timothy Hogarth	John Carmody
Dr. Glass	John Clarke
Bank Messenger	Russell Morrison
Senator Blake	Edward Mannery

Gaited to a swifter pace than "Three Men on a Horse," this latest of the George Abbott endeavors to outspeed all of his earlier farces last night rocked a receptive audience on a continuous wave of laughter in the National Theater.

It is, of course, a completely nonsensical bit of tomfoolery that has no permanent value as a theatrical item of enduring worth, but it serves a very useful present purpose in offering an evening of hilarity that has not been matched behind the footlights this season—or in several seasons, for that matter.

The entire action takes place in a room in the White Way Hotel, New York, where a shoestring theatrical producer and his troupe, about to embark upon the precarious adventure of a new author's first play, attempt to stall off the consequences of operating without a penny of bank account or any tangible financial backing. The complications that can arise from a situation of this sort will be as surprising to those familiar with the devious doings of "show business" as to those concerned in the complex conduct of great metropolitan hostelries.

Is Crazy-Quilt Design.

The clever devices of wily chiselers, the budding romances of blind youth, the shrewd schemes of bogus bonifaces, the bungling enterprises of dim-witted "stooges" and the camouflaged swindles of racketeering "grifters" all enter into the volcanic pattern of this crazy-quilt design for going into convulsions in the theater. Seldom is merriment so high-pitched and uninterrupted as during the three acts of this lunatic game of battledore and shuttlecock.

The piece has been fabricated with uncanny skill. It is as closely woven as a watertight Panama hat and as hot with provocative lines as a bowl of chili is with chopped peppers.

"Room Service" is one of those self-propelled plays that is virtually actor-proof. It is a jig-saw puzzle of crazy situations to which the dialogue is an accessory rather than an element of motivation.

It is not the original New York cast that appears at the National this week—they are still bowling along on Broadway—but the company assembled for the Chicago run of the comedy. There were those in last night's audience who had seen the play in New York who were sure that the "first company" has more zip—that it gives the work a trip-hammer quality that was lacking here last night. Well, now, I don't know.

Last night's genial company batted the thing across with more zest than has been manifested on a local rostrum for a good many months and were rewarded with a barrage of curtain calls at the end that seemed to suggest that Washington's first-night house had been pretty thoroughly diverted. If there is anything inherent in the structure of the frolic that wasn't adequately brought out in last night's performance, it must be very much more deeply seated than the surface risibilities.

Principals "Go to Town."

As I have said, "Room Service" is to all intents and purposes actor-proof. It would be funny in the hands of any group of reasonably competent players. It is conceivable, however, that it might be less funny if entrusted to four pivotal principals not quite so deft as Reed Brown, jr.—who at times looks surprisingly like Robert Montgomery—James Lane, Nat Cantor and Clinton Sundberg. The "serious" business of the three acts devolves largely upon Mr. Brown, the penniless producer. The comedy cliches are wisely intrusted to the Messrs. Lane, Sundberg and Cantor. They make very few fumbles.

Scarcely less important in the lunatic developments are Matt Briggs, as an explosive hotel executive with an enormous oath constantly on his lips; Fleming Ward, as the hotel manager; Michael Dalmatoff, as a waiter from the Moscow Art Theater with ambitions to act again; Marshall Bradford, issuer of the check that bounces, and Mary Cheffey and Patricia Palmer as the "heart interest." Since it is distinctly a "man's play," feminine interest doesn't so much matter although it helps.

For a frivolous evening away from the Browning and Shakespeare Club, I can think of no better prescription than "Room Service"—take it or leave it.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Louise Fazenda, Noted Comedienne, Adds Name To List of Stars Coming to the Capital This Week-End

Former Mack Sennett Funster, Now in East, Will Arrive in Washington Friday; Highlights of Sunday's 'Command Performance;' New Recording in 'Hollywood Hotel;' Notes of the Theater.

LOUISE FAZENDA is the latest addition to the growing list of distinguished stars of stage, screen and radio who will visit Washington this week-end to take part in the President's Birthday celebration. This information was imparted late yesterday by long distance phone call from Charles Einfeld, New York home office executive of Warner Brothers.

BELL.

Miss Fazenda, one of the cinema's ace comediennes and one of Hollywood's most gracious personalities, has not been in Washington since the visit of the late Will Rogers' company filming local scenes for Sam Rork's film version of the Charles Hoyt farce of "A Texas Steer," in which she played a leading role. That must have been 12 or 13 years ago.

It was on the occasion of this visit of a stellar troupe that included George Marion, the late Sam Hardy, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and numerous other notables, in addition, of course, to Will Rogers and Miss Fazenda, that the National Press Club conferred the title of "Ambassador without portfolio" upon Rogers before an audience of some 7,000 persons in the Washington Auditorium.

Next to Rogers, Miss Fezenda was the hit of the evening. It was then that she confided to the membership of the Press Club and their guests that she held newspapermen in such high esteem that she was going to marry one of them as soon as she returned to Hollywood. And that is precisely what she did. The fortunate bridegroom was Hal Wallis, associate producer, with Jack Warner, of Warner Brothers and First National Pictures. It is just barely possible, although there is as yet no definite assurance of the fact, that Mr. Wallis may accompany his wife to Washington this week.

It is a boast perhaps too often reiterated in this space that Miss Fazenda is a fellow-Hoosier, born in La Fayette, Ind., the birthplace of this column's revered maternal ancestor. Despite all her clowning on the screen—from the old Mack Sennett days down to the present—Louise Fazenda is one of the most unaffected and most genuine persons it has ever been my privilege to know in "show business." Like John Boles, Evelyn Laye, Joe. E. Brown and the late Herb Williams, she is the sort that one is happy to welcome into his home—not to sit in the "front parlor," but to come upstairs into the library-living room and be one of the family.

It will be nice to have Louise back again, even if only for a minute or so.

• • • •

If this business has to be time-tabled, Miss Fazenda, who arrived in the East only a few days ago, following the completion of "Swing Your Lady," her latest picture, will arrive in the Capital on Friday in time to attend the official luncheon and later dinner to be given by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen in honor of the visiting stars. These—as, of course, you already know—will include, among others, Fredric March and Florence Eldredge (Mrs. March), Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Janet Gaynor, Joe E. Brown and all the rest. All will appear at the seven Washington hotels housing special gala celebrations in honor of the President and the Warm Springs Foundation Fund for the combat of infantile paralysis, as well as at the special midnight shows to be presented in the Earle and Capitol Theaters, for which tickets now are on sale at all Warner Brothers and Loew houses at a flat price of $1 per seat.

• • • •

Afterthoughts on the "command performance" of "Between the Devil," at the National Sunday night; Evelyn Laye was radiant in her dressing room after the fall of the final curtain, posing for photographs and evincing every indication of having been amply repaid for the grueling demands of a "one-night stand" by the enthusiasm of the audience and the personal interest manifested in the undertaking by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, who was a backstage visitor after the first act . . . Beatrice Lillie, that effervescent comedienne who has no peer in the contemporary theater, is the same "off" as "on" . . . When she barged into the Laye dressing room it was as if a high-voltage live wire had been strung through the place . . . One of the major credits for a superlative performance must be chalked up opposite the name of Fred De Cordova, stage manager, and the crew of "grips" he brought down from the Imperial Theater in New York . . . By some mechanical legerdemain they ran off a two-act and 12-scene musical comedy on a strange stage without a hitch—a genuine feat of technical skill and theatrical craftsmanship . . . While chatting with Frances Starr annd your reporter between the acts, Ward Morehouse, of the New York Sun, remarked: "Nels, I covered this show in its opening night in New York and had to come down here to find out how good it is. The thing is a revelation to me" . . . It was to me, too, and made me wonder why so many feel that expansive musicals of the screen have written a definite period to elaborate musical comedy productions on the stage . . . Is this single performance to be the only taste of musical comedy we are to have this season, Mr. Plohn? Or wouldn't you know as yet?

• • • •

And speaking of screen musicals, as we were at least by implication, I am confirmed in my belief expressed—I hope—in Saturady's review that the recording of instrumental music in "Hollywood Hotel," now on view at the Earle Theater, represents as great an advance toward perfection as "The Firefly," for example, registered in its capturing of vocal passages. There is a reason. Heralded as one of the most important developments since the introduction of sound to the screen, a new, fine-grain film for sound recording is used in "Hollywood Hotel" and will be employed in all future Warner Brothers productions. Months of research and experimentation by the Eastman Kodak Co. were necessary to produce the new celluloid, which offers lower surface noise, much greater volume range and a more faithful reproduction of all frequencies, particularly of the high notes. The higher volume is obtained without tone distortion. The film has the advantage of being extremely easy to handle, so I am told, and requires no new equipment for its successful use. The pioneer audible films, the Warner Brothers are the first to bring this new development to the screen.

• • • •

When Burton Holmes, world-famous traveltalker, lectures in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School tomorrow—the third travelogue in his new series of five, being presented here on Wednesday nights—on the topic of "The World-Wide British Empire," he will be offering this subject for the first time anywhere.

The talk will encompass all of the British insular possessions, including Bermuda, Nassau, Jamaica, Trinidad and St. Helena, for a beginning, and then Nova Scotia, a tour across Canada, the Fiji Islands, Tasmania, Australia, the Malay States, India and the Vale of Kashmir; from Gibraltar through the Suez Canal, Egypt and whatnot under the English flag. This seems to be one of Mr. Holmes' most all-embracing intineraries.

• • • •

What with Grace Moore, Gladys Swarthout and other divas' having established themselves, more or less, as screen stars, it will be interesting to note the debut of Helen Jepsen, streamlined songstress of the Metropolitan Opera Company, in Samuel Goldwyn's forthcoming production of "The Goldwyn Follies." In this glorified musical, Miss Jepson will be making her acting as well as cinema debut. She is cast in the "real-life" role of an opera star who tries her luck before the cameras. It is a role that embraces some smart comedy exchanges with Edgar Bergen's Charlie McCarthy, a bit of mild flirtation with Bobby Clark, a dash of duetting with Kenny Baker and considerable operatic singing. While she has created many characters on the grand opera stage, Miss Jepson never has looked upon that as "acting." It will be interesting to learn what she thinks of the studios' staccato methods of recording character delineations, one "shot" at a time.

Star Sends Chum Off on Vacation

Fame has brought to Marjorie Weaver sufficient money to make her first grand gesture to a friend of college days.

The black-eyed player sent her stand-in, Judi Parks, by plane to her home in Portland, Ind., for a holiday, while she remained in Hollywood and did her own standing-in for the last two days of "Sally, Irene and Mary."

Marjorie and Judi were college chums and roommates in the same sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma, at Indiana University.

Vanderbilt Nags Named by Starlet

At least 15 promising young thoroughbreds in the stables of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, millionaire sportsman, will bear names bestowed on them by Phyllis Brooks, film player, when they make their racing debut.

The young actress, one of the sextet of screen charmers in the cast of "Walking Down Broadway," selected names for the 15 horses at Vanderbilt's request after they had met at the home of a mutual friend.

Coming in Person and on Screen

FREDRIC MARCH,

who, with Florence Eldredge (Mrs. March), will be in Washington over the week-end to participate in the President's Birthday celebration. Mr. March also plays the stellar role of Jean Lafitte in Cecil B. De Mille's screen production of "The Buccaneer," recently given one preview showing at Loew's Palace and to be regularly presented as the next attraction at that house.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 24.—If Darryl Zanuck, of Twentieth Century-Fox, feels a bit chesty just now, I can't blame him, for he has accomplished—and keeps on accomplishing—something that most of his fellow producers considered an impossibility. Starting from scratch, with only two big-name stars on his contract list, he not only has produced profitable pictures but, in the process, has built up one of the most brilliant collections of stellar personalities in the business. He has recruited rank newcomers and made them topnotchers without spending a fortune in the process.

SONJA HENIE.

• • • •

Shirley Temple was already a big star—Zanuck has made her still bigger. Three years ago, Hollywood had never heard of Don Ameche, Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power and the Ritz Brothers. Zanuck has made them headline attractions. In George Sanders, Marjorie Weaver, Virginia Field and Arleen Whelan, he has sure-fire star material. Alice Faye and Loretta Young have been lifted from the bottom to near the top of the Hollywood ladder.

• • • •

The biggest producers in this business have always contended that big stars make big pictures. I think that Zanuck has proved most conclusively that good pictures make big stars. And the sooner the rest of the studio bosses adopt his point of view, the better it will be for the picture industry, in my opinion.

Today, at lunch, a visiting fireman from the East took time out to sneer at Wallace Beery's pretensions to "toughness"—and I rallied to the defense with an anecdote that is worth retelling here. Maybe it does not prove physical courage, but I think it shows moral strength of a very high order. It happened about eight years ago. Wally was working on the set when he received word that a supposedly sound bank in which he had deposits totalling $120,000 had just closed its doors. That crash represented the loss of every penny Wally owned in the world at that time, and, for a moment, he seemed dazed by the news. Suddenly he looked at the sympathetic faces of his fellow workers—and laughed. "Well," said he, "don't just stand there speechless—isn't anyone going to invite me to lunch?"

For a good many years, Hollywood's big name stars have been the targets of every advertising scheme concocted. Manufacturers have appealed to their vanity—and their desire for publicity—in order to persuade them to endorse everything from rat poison to jewelry. But it seems that Hollywood's stars are at last getting smart. This morning I heard a manufacturer's representative appealing to Loretta Young for an endorsement. "What is there in it for me?" she demanded. "Well," he hedged, "just consider the publicity involved." "Bosh," snapped Loretta, "I don't need that kind of publicity. You tell your manufacturer that my name must mean something to him in dollars and cents or he wouldn't want to use it. I have worked for ten years to make my name worth something to me. Tell him that I like and use his product—but money talks."

Nan Gray is a very disillusioned young lady. Four years ago, in Houston, Texas, she saw a stage play, "The Royal Family." Donald Woods was the leading man—and then and there 14-year-old Nan developed a soul-stirring crush. Even after coming to Hollywood and getting a screen break, Don remained enshrined in her mind as an ideal, an ethereal, superman. A few days ago, when she reported for work in "The Black Doll," he was introduced to her as her leading man. Five minutes later, while her heart still beat like a trip hammer, they played their first scene together. It called for an embrace and a kiss. And alas for the ideal of years, Don had eaten onions for his lunch!

Cafe Life.

The glitter and glamour of New York night life in the El Morocco, Rainbow Rooms, and other famed gathering spots for the stay-up-lates will be brought to the screen in a pretentious comedy romance, "Cafe Society," it was announced last week by William LeBaron, managing director of production for Paramount.

Stars at Gayety

THURSDAY EVENING Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt went to Town Hall to hear her grandson, James Roosevelt, debate. She couldn't get tickets at the boxoffice, because of a sellout. Some one finally recognized her, invited her inside, but was unable to find room for her inside. One member of the League for Political Education arose, bowed, and offered: "I am a Republican, madam. See, we're not bad folks? You may have my chair." . . . J. Edgar Hoover wired Jim Braddock last night: "Your win was even more thrilling than capturing the Ross kidnaper." . . . Amon Carter went to see the President this week, to arrange for a canal from Fort Worth to the Gulf of Mexico.

"YESTERDAY I asked my son," writes Fred B. Snite, father of the boy in the Iron Lung, "if he wanted to go on the air for the President's Birthday Celebration. His reply was 'I am afraid the excitement would be too much for me. But if it will relieve you of any embarrassment, I will.' Yesterday he went 13½ minutes on his own. Today he could make only seven. And our present staff consists of seven nurses, two orderlies and one doctor on 24-hour duty . . . In China it was 117 days before he could say one word on his own, and the effort required was equivalent to an ordinary person runing a 100-yard dash on a hot day . . . And that one word he was able to speak—was 'God.'"

WHEN WARNER BROS., submitted the script of "The Man Without a Country" to the Hays office, the script was approved in its entirety, except for one line, in which Phillip Nolan shouts: "Damn the United States." The censors finally were shown—that the line appears in all the history books, exactly that way . . . Physicians who've just returned from Spain insist that half of the patients in the hospitals are war casualties—the other half there victims of auto accidents . . . Eleanor Holm, dancing to a waltz-tune, sighed heavily. "What's the idea?" her partner asked. "That music," Eleanor sighed again. "I used to swim to that music."

THERE'S A WYNN now in each of the only two legitimate theaters remaining on Broadway—Ed WYNN, at the Winter Garden, and his son, Keenan Wynn, at the Empire. Keenan, who opened last night in "Star Wagon," got a pep talk from his dad, about not being nervous. "Okay, pop, I won't forget," Keenan promised. And so the most nervous performer on Broadway last night—was Ed Wynn . . . Noel Coward now tells intimates: "I made my money by the sweat of my high-brow" . . . After the slugging, Critic John Mason Brown wired Dick Watts: "I see Kirkland has another hit."

Allen Doesn't Like Hollywood Hours

Accustomed to working at nights on his radio program, Fred Allen, noted comic, had to change his routine completely when he came to Hollywood to play his second starring screen role in "Sally, Irene and Mary."

Instead of arising late each morning, Allen declared he was aroused before the break of day by a loud pounding on his door, and when he answered it, he was met by an employe of the studio.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

New League Gets Under Way, Griffith Spending Entire Winter Raiding National League Talent; Made White Sox Manager.

Chapter Ten.

ON THE GUARANTEE BY CLARK GRIFFITH that he could induce sufficient ballplayers . . . including stars . . to "jump" the National League, Ban Johnson and Charles Comiskey set in motion the plans to establish the American League as a rival major organization.

The chief "angel" of Johnson and Comiskey was Charles Somers, Cleveland coal magnate who had long been a friend of the pair. Somers who held the Cleveland franchise also agreed to finance the Boston Club until the league could find another backer.

John McGraw, who, during the 1900 season had been with the St. Louis Cardinals, was nursing a peeve against certain National League club owners and requested an American League franchise for Baltimore. McGraw, who was willing to provide his own backing, was allotted a franchise.

The league rounded out its Eastern section by placing a team in Washington under the management of Jimmy Manning, who brought virtually the entire Kansas City squad to the Capital.

In the West, Comiskey was already established on Chicago's South Side and Detroit took a franchise under the management of George Stallings. Cleveland, with Somers as its backer, was a sure thing, and Milwaukee was given a berth as the fourth Western club. Despite the fact that Connie Mack had moved from Milwaukee to accept part ownership and the management of the Philadelphia team, the city took a league franchise with Hugh Duffy as manager.

Griffith Made Manager of New Chicago Team.

BAN JOHNSON WAS INSTALLED as president of the new American League and Comiskey set himself up as owner of the Chicago White Sox. In recognition of Griffith's aid in the formation of the new league, Comiskey appointed him manager of the Chicago team, with the thorough approval of Johnson.

The league had disposed of its eight franchises, but thus far it was a skeleton organization boasting not a single big league ballplayer except Griffith, who had proudly announced that he was the first to "jump" to the American League.

But on the assurance of Griffith that he could persuade other star players to follow his example, Johnson set about to make an equitable distribution of the playing talent the American League hoped to acquire in its raids on the National.

With more hope than confidence, Johnson announced that each franchise holder in the American League would be entitled to select five National League players as a nucleus for its team. Johnson reserved the right to settle all claims over priority of selection and, with surprising smoothness, the choices were made. The league head left the matter of securing additional talent and the rounding out of teams to the individual clubs.

TAKEN IN THE DAYS when he was pitching for Missoula and riding Western mustangs on the side, this picture is a fair representation of how Clark Griffith must have looked to National League owners during the winter of 1900-01 . . . gunning for their best players and riding roughshod over all opposition to procure talent for the new American League.

The work of persuading the players to "jump" devolved almost entirely on Griffith, who, in a frenzied effort to make good on his promise, spent the entire winter in traveling to every city or hamlet where a selected ballplayer was at home in the off-season.

National League Raided on All Fronts.

BUT GRIFFITH HAD NOT RECKONED wrong. His own act of "jumping" the National League was widely publicized and was a powerful influence on skeptical players. Under Griffith's persuasion, star after star fell in line. In fact, only one of the 40 National League players, peremptorily selected by the league clubs, failed to join up with the new American League. That was Honus Wagner.

Meanwhile, the National League, snugly confident that no such bold venture could succeed and having successively met previous threats of the same type, virtually slumbered, while Griffith raided its clubs for talent.

Into New England, along the East Coast, through the South and as far West as Kansas City, Griffith traveled on his forays for talent and to the American League he delivered virtually every star it had wanted. To reach the home of Fielder Jones, at Shinglehousem, N. Y., Griffith trudged three miles through knee-deep snow, turned his oratory on that star outfielder and convinced him his future lay with the new league.

Griffith virtually gutted a number of National League clubs with his raids. For his own Chicago team, he took Pitcher Jimmy Callahan and Infielder Sammy Mertes from the Cubs. Catcher Billy Sullivan he proselyted from Boston and Fielder Jones he acquired from Brooklyn.

The Boston Braves lost Jimmy Collins, Frank La Chance and Chick Stahl to the rival Boston American League Club, and Bill Dineen also jumped the team. Thus did Griffith get even with A. H. Soden, Braves' owner, who had frustrated the Ballplayers Association demands for a maximum wage of $3,000.

G. Harris (Doc) White jumped to the Chicago Americans from the Phillies and McGraw brought a slew of players from the Cardinals to Baltimore. But it was the act of Connie Mack in grabbing Nap Lajoie from the Phillies that finally succeeded in arousing the National League to unprededecented ire.

Nap Lajoie "Jumps" Despite Court Injunction.

COL. JOHN I. ROGERS, owner of the Phillies, who had ridiculed the idea that the American League might invade Philadelphia, sobered a bit when the franchise-holders leased a park site. And he was almost uncontrollable when he realized that Connie Mack had succeeded in signing his star second baseman, Nap Lajoie.

Into court went the Phillies' owner, and he came out of it proudly waving an injunction, forbidding Lajoie to play in Pennsylvania with a team other than the Phillies. But the American League circumvented that obstacle by quickly engineering a deal that sent Lajoie to Cleveland and brought three Cleveland players to Philadelphia.

However, to avoid all chance of losing title to Lajoie, the American League never permitted the star second baseman to play with Cleveland when that club was performing at Philadelphia and for several years when Lajoie traveled through Philadelphia as a member of the Indians, he traveled only by night.

Griffith's winter-long raid on the National League was marked

Henry Picard Winner Of Pasadena Tourney

HENRY PICARD

JIMMY HINES

Jimmy Hines Finishes Second, Nelson Third, Thomson Fourth.

By the United Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 24.—Henry Picard, the smooth-stroking Hershey, Pa., professional, who accents accuracy instead of distance, outlasted the heaviest hitters of golfdom today to capture the $3,000 Pasadena Open Tournament with a 72-hole score of 276.

Trailing by one stroke when the fourth round opened, this morning, Picard exhibited the same steady but unspectacular game that placed him among American money-winners in 1937.

He turned the first nine holes of the Brookside Park Course in 34, then came home in 35 for scores of 70-66-71-69—276.

Picard's victory netted him $700.

Second place went to Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, who smashed into this position with a fourth round of 67, lowest 18-hole score of the day. He had 211-67—278, two strokes more than Picard. He won $450.

Sets Tourney Mark.

Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., who established a new course record of 64 with Jimmy Thomson yesterday, shot even par of 71 on the final round for a total of 279, worth $350.

Thomson was off his game and took a 74 for a purse of $280, exactly $1 a stroke for the tournament.

Although often out-driven, Picard won the tournament with uncanny work on the greens. He had two putts or less on every hole and sank shots of 12 and 27 feet on the ninth and fifteenth greens. His victory

Braddock-Farr Near Terms For Return Match on April 1

Promoter Jacobs Objects to Percentages Demanded, but Expects to Sign Both Friday.

(Picture on Page 17.)

By Eddie Brietz,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 24.—A return 12-round bout between James J. Braddock, former heavyweight champion, and the Welshman, Tommy Farr, in Madison Square Garden April 1, was all but signed today.

Promoter Mike Jacobs said he hopes to have the bout in the bag by Friday, when Braddock is expected to decide to accept 35 per cent as his share of the gate instead of the 37½ per cent he is demanding.

Farr also held out for 27½ per cent—just what he got for last Friday's fight—instead of the 20 per cent Jacobs offered, but Tommy, who still feels he was the victim of a raw decision last week, is so anxious for a return crack at Jimmy it is not likely he'll let this difference stand in the way of the meeting.

He made this attitude plain when he flatly turned down Jacobs' offer to fight Max Baer here March 11. "It's Jim I want," said Tommy. "I'm not going to take a chance of getting hurt before I meet him again."

Before going into conference with Jacobs, Farr and Braddock posed for photographers and Tommy apologized to Braddock for not shaking hands with him in the ring after Friday's fight.

Later, Farr explained the affair to newspapermen as follows:

"I can't see why the people should expect me to kiss Braddock after getting what I thought was a raw decision, but I humbly apologize to Braddock if I hurt his feelings. I didn't see him when he came across the ring and the films will bear me out. I didn't know what the booing was about when I left the ring. If I had known Braddock was up there to shake hands I'd have run back up those steps to meet him."

Jim Mutrie, First Giant Pilot, Dies

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 24.—Jim Mutrie, 86, the first manager of the New York Giants, in 1883, died today at a cancer institute on Welfare Island. He had been ill for many months. He was a native of New England and managed a club at New Bedford, Mass., before organizing the Giants with John B. Day.

Mutrie piloted the Giants to two pennants in 1888 and 1889.

The Giants got their nickname from the aggregation Day, the club president, and Mutrie introduced to Metropolitan fandom more than a half century ago.

They took the pick of players on the Troy (N. Y.) team, which passed out of the National League in 1882. The list included the great William (Buck) Ewing, one of the great catchers of all time; First Baseman Roger Connor, Pitcher Mickey Welch, Outfielder Pat Gillespie, and Shortstop Ed Caskins. John Montgomery Ward, a famous all-around star, was obtained from Providence and James (Tip) O'Neil, a star pitcher, from the sandlots.

The Giants, under Mutrie, were overshadowed for several years by Pop Anson's famous Chicago Club. With the addition of Tim Keefe, noted pitcher, and Danny Richardson, infielder, the New York team struck its stride, won two straight pennants and made a place for itself in baseball history.

Odds Favor Cadet Team

St. John's smooth-working five will be heavily favored to defend its Prep championship when it meets Gonzaga tonight at 8 p. m. in Catholic University's gym.

The Johnnies, with eight victories and only one loss are generally conceded to be the fastest scholastic team in the vicinity, while Gonzaga has been inconsistent in its efforts to date. However, Coach Orrel Mitchell's purple-clad team has pointed for the traditional battle and another of their famous struggles would not be improbable.

St. John's will start: Jim Mulvihill and Bat Battiste, at forwards; Jim Giebel, at center and Joe Gallagher and Jim Swagart, at guards.

Gonzaga's tentative lineup includes: Chip Collins and Jerry Connolly, at forwards; Fred Rice, at center, and Joe Hieberger and Buddy O'Brien at guards.

Game time is 8 o'clock.

Ryerson Wins Medal.

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Jack Ryerson, amateur linksman from Cooperstown, N. Y., shot a one under par score here today to win medalist honors in the qualifying round of the Florida winter championship for the Ponce de Leon Cup.

'Old Pete' Answers His Critics; Explains That Day in 1926

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Jan. 24.—Here's Old Pete Alexander's story of that celebrated occasion when he stood off the Yankees for the Cardinals in the seventh and final game of the 1926 world series, as retold by Maurice Shevlin, sports editor of St. Louis Globe Democrat:

"I had pitched and won the game the day before . . . Roger Hornsby said after the game, 'Pete, I may need you tomorrow, so please don't do any drinking' . . . I told Rog I would be with him from that time until the next afternoon; that I would eat with him and sleep with him, which I did . . . after the game the newspapermen of New York said I stumbled out to the mound . . . they asked him if I were drunk . . . instead of denying it, as he should, he said: 'Alexander can pitch better drunk than most men sober' . . . remember I am not criticising Rog . . . he was a great ball player, a judge of ball players, but I never liked him for that one remark."

* * * *

Old-timers' bench: "What's the idea, giving Bob Fitzsimmons the nod over Jim Corbett as your No. 1 entry for fistiana's Hall of Fame? . . . Give Fitz credit for being great, a physical freak who whipped all sizes over a long period, but Gentleman Jim was tops . . . He not only beat the renowned John L. Sullivan but was the father of scientific boxing, a clean-living fighter who was an inspiration to the Nation's youth and helped lift prize fighting out of the barrooms, an actor and lecturer of reputation, and a businessman who left a fortune of $400,000 when he died."

* * * *

Two years ago Charles E. Solle, a veteran baseball fan, gave his first ten choices for the major league Hall of Fame to Frank Weir, sports editor of the Springfield (Ill.) State Register . . . Nine of Solle's selections are now officially on the list of immortals and the tenth, Wee Willie Keeler, isn't far away . . . Another old-timer writes: "With all this talk of basketball greats, you young fellows don't seem to recall that the old Buffalo Germans, later reorganized as the Buffalo Hewitts, ranked with the best of all time . . . Remember Hank Faust and Lewis? . . . Faust was the slickest ball handler of his time . . ."

* * * *

Note to Bruce Dudley, sports editor of Louisville Courier-Journal and the man in the checked suit on Kentucky Derby day: Ford Frick, National League prexy, says new league ball has cover exactly 1 128 of an inch thicker than its American League rival . . . and that five-strand seam, instead of four, comprise entire difference in balls . . . otherwise they consist of the cushion cork center, three wool and one cotton yarn wrappings, wound altogether to circumference of 8¾ inches, 1/16 ounce of cement, and selected horsehide-cover . . . that's official.

Irish Break With Pitt in Cage Fight

Notre Dame Schedules Fail to List Panthers in Future Games.

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 24.—Notre Dame and Pittsburgh apparently had reached a parting of athletic ways tonight. Reports persisted on the Notre Dame campus that a basketball game between the two schools here February 5 would mark the end of Irish-Panther rivalry.

Notre Dame officials would not say all athletic relations with Pittsburgh would be severed after the basketball game, but the Irish sports schedules, as now drawn up, do not list any other future competition with Pitt.

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame's athletic director, commented only:

"Schedule commitments for two or three years ahead make it impossible to book the Panthers."

The South Bend Tribune said today the schools would "sever athletic relations permanently" after the February 5 basketball game.

In Notre Dame's football schedule for 1938, announced some weeks ago, Georgia Tech replaced Pittsburgh. Irish-Panther rivalry has been one of the high spots on the gridiron cards of both schools for several seasons.

The Tribune said Carnegie Tech or Duquesne would replace the Panthers on the Irish basketball schedule.

Reports from Pittsburgh that Notre Dame had asked H. C. Carlson, Pitt basketball coach, to discontinue zone defense in the recent Irish-Panther basketball game there was called "absurd" by George Keogan, Notre Dame mentor.

"Pitt," Keogan said, "can use any defense it wants to when it plays here February 5. I didn't ask anyone to discontinue the zone defense, but I have told Carlson and other coaches that I try not to schedule teams which use it, because it makes for uninteresting basketball."

Keogan denied Pittsburgh reports that Notre Dame insisted on Western Conference officials for the game.

"Pittsburgh picked the officials," Keogan asserted, "and we approved them."

Ray Ingram Gets Verdict

Beats Stumpy Jacobs; Joey Green Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24.—Ray Ingram, 137½, Washington, D. C., fighter, had little trouble here tonight pounding out a 10-round decision over veteran Stumpy Jacobs, 138, Hopewell, Va.

Jacobs, stopped in his comeback by his loss tonight, and battle-scarred from over 300 fights, could not find the elusive ray with his vicious rights that felled Joey Green and Lou Jallos in that order.

The fight opened with both boys taking it easy and Jacobs the aggressor. The Washington boy's style puzzled Stumpy at first, but he landed a hard right which nearly floored Ingram near the end of the first. Stumpy lost the third on a foul and the fast-stepping Ray outboxed him the rest of the way.

Cowboy Howard Scott, of Washington, challenged the winner to a fight here next Monday night.

Joey Green, 138, Washington, D. C., won a decision over Brooks Bowen, 134, Richmond, Va., in a four-round preliminary.

Carolina Girl Wins Medal

By the Associated Press.

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 24.—Despite high winds which kept most of the scores above the eighties, Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., defending titleholder, took the medal with a 78 in the qualifying round of the women's championship of champions golf tournament today.

Match play starts tomorrow morning.

The qualifying scores:

Hemphill, 78; Bers, 79; Jameson, 81; Bauer, 83; Gardner, 86; Audrey Phipps, Palm Beach, 87; Mrs. William Hockenjos, Jr., Lake Hopatcong, N. J., 89; Marian McDougall, Portland, Oreg., 90; Sally Guth, Webster Groves, Mo., 90; Mrs. Lee Walper, Fort Myer, 91; Eloise Briese, Fort Myers, 94; Mrs. George Chalmers, Fort Myers, 96; Mrs. J. J. Gonzagans Defeat W.-L.

O'Brien and Collins Star in 32-22 Victory.

Gonzaga High School's basketball team unleashed a second-half scoring barrage that netted it 21 points and victory over Washington-Lee's Little Generals yesterday in the Virginians' Ballston gym, 32 to 22.

Led by Buddy O'Brien and Chip Collins, the purple-clad Washington boys added to a 1-point half-time lead of 11 to 10 to win, holding the Virginians to a single basket in the last quarter.

Erwin Will Protest Decision to Arcelli

Jimmy Erwin, manager of Battling Burroughs, will file a protest with the boxing commission today concerning the technical knockout scored against his charge last night at the Arena.

Burroughs suffered a scalp wound late in the first round when butted by Werther Arcelli, and efforts to stop the flow of blood between rounds proved futile, hence. Referee Eddie La Fond halted the fight in the second.

Erwin contends La Fond was not within his rights in the action, inasmuch as Burroughs was not seriously injured, and was holding his own with the Boston veteran when the bout was terminated.

New Yorker Rushes Foe, Wins Verdict

Underdog Outpunches New Englander; Borroughs Loses.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A curly-haired Jewish boy with the fighing style of a barnyard bantam—Al Reid—punched his way to a decisive eight-round decision over Tony Dupre last night at Turner's Arena.

The result was a distinct upset, as any of the disappointing crowd of 1,000 will attest, but the verdict was well received. As late as a few minutes before the first bell the gambling gentry liked Dupre's chances well enough to offer 7-5 odds on him, and there were few takers.

Reid simply carried too much power in his mittens for the astonished Dupre, whose counter punches were not potent enough to offset the New York lad's bull-like charges. Al crowded Dupre to the ropes from the first bell to the last, whipping him around the body with a relentless barrage of gloves and varying his attack infrequently with shots to the head.

Dupre Shows Flashes.

Thrice during the fight, late in the eighth and in the fourth and fifth, Dupre shook his opponent with punishing left hooks to the head, but they had no effect on the New Yorker. Reid merely lowered his head and came boring in with both hands pumping to the body. Dupre had no effective defense for Reid's buzz-saw style.

Reid opened a cut over Dupre's right eye with a hard overhand right in the eighth, and rammed home more body blows with both fists to clinch the verdict. Dupre, beaten but not dishonored, fought back and, as noted above, scored with both hands to the head, but Reid still carried the round.

Dupre rocked Al with two hard rights to the head in the fifth, and smashed him with a left to the same sector, but Reid continued to wade in, looking for a vulnerable spot in his opponent's defense. He found one, and shot a stinging right to the jaw, but Dupre recovered quickly and speared him with a left, following with a right to the head. Reid was penalized for hitting on the break in this round.

Drives Dupre to Ropes.

The Bronx battler took command of the fight in the sixth session, driving Dupre to the ropes and planting a hard left in his midsection. He caught the Manchester boxer in a corner and whipped both hands to the head and shifted his attack to the body before Dupre escaped. Tony tried to lead, abandoning his counter-punching, only to be met by another flurry of leather as Reid drove a left to the head and closed in with both hands working on the body.

He followed up in the seventh, driving Dupre to the ropes and forcing him to hold for safety. Dupre speared Al with a couple of light lefts and an impotent right, but missed too much for his own good.

Battling Burroughs, popular welterweight, was the victim of an unfortunate series of butts in the semifinal which came to an abrupt and highly unsatisfactory ending after 2:30 of the second round. Werther Arcelli, Boston veteran, was the victor.

Burroughs accidentally, or so it appeared, butted Arcelli clean off his feet in the first round and from then on it was a duel that would have shamed a brace of billy goats. Arcelli finally butted Burroughs high on the forehead, and the wound spurted blood so profusely Referee Eddie Lafond had no choice but to stop the bout.

Burroughs was more than holding his own at the finish. Arcelli, as a matter of fact, didn't like Burroughs' punches any more than his butting.

The first two preliminaries, both hard-fought, 4-round affairs, resulted in victories for Mike Morton and Tommy Hoover. Morton came from behind with a vicious right-hand attack in the last round to beat Charley Gilley. Hoover, a substitute, took a close verdict from Rugged El Brookman. Brookman might easily have gotten a draw out of it.

Mucho Gusto Scores by Length and Half in Pompano at Hialeah

New York, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Braddock-Farr bout makes Champion Joe Louis a bigger question mark.

The law of supply and demand continues to carry on in the heavyweight division. It becomes more and more evident that there isn't a top-flight, No. 1, knock 'em dead heavy campaigning in the ring today—judged by standards of the past. But the fans continue to swarm out to see them perform. After all they're the best we have to offer. And they like to see the big fellows fight—good or bad.

* * * *

Madison Square Garden was jammed the other night to see Jim Braddock upset Tommy Farr. It wasn't a great fight. Yet everybody in the Garden got his or her money's worth—for sentimental reasons. That's the word—"sentiment." That's the word that made Friday night's bout at the Garden a satisfying fight.

* * * *

"Sentiment" has replaced the craving for "class" among most followers of the heavies. Because it is so long since any of them saw genuine "class" that they've forgotten what it means. They haven't seen a genuine heavy of championship caliber since Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney tangled in their last brawl at Chicago in 1927.

Now we have as heavyweight champion a Detroit Negro, Joe Louis. This Louis is only 23 years old. He's still a young man, different from most big shots among the heavies — fellows like Max Schmeling and Braddock. Marse Joe Louis climbed to the top on a string of knockouts that was amazing.. He was hailed as a "super man"—as the "Brown Bomber"—"Tan Tornado," etc. But—before he won the title, he was knocked out by ancient Max Schmeling.

* * * *

Schmeling, who won the right to a title fight with the then Champion Braddock, was muscled out of a title fight. Louis fought for the title, instead, and won it by virtue of an eighth-round knockout over Braddock at Chicago last June.

* * * *

Louis is recognized generally as world champion. But everyone knows he is not a great champion. Because mediocre Bob Pastor made him look like a Palooka while lasting ten rounds against him; Schmeling knocked him out, and Jorge Brescia almost kayoed him at the Hippodrome. Then, last August, Tommy Farr gave him a very close fight at Yankee Stadium for the ful 15 rounds.

* * * *

And against Braddock Friday night, Farr looked like an amateur, at times. Farr fought exactly the wrong kind of fight—continually sticking his nose into Braddock's best blow, a right uppercut, etc. Braddock, who admits to 32 years, but who probably is closer to 35, beat Farr by a narrow margin —by a Garrison finish. But he beat him just the same. And if Braddock had been five years younger, he would have murdered Farr. That's how bad Farr is. That's how mediocre is the man from Wales who gave Louis that great fight last August.

* * * *

Now—they tell me that Louis has become a great night club personage and that his marriage is headed for the rocks. I do not know how true those reports are. But they do not deluge me with additional respect for Jolting Joe's physical prowess. Louis is training now at Pompton Lakes for his first "tune-up" bout—against Nathan Mann at Madison Square Garden on February 23. Louis wishes to get three tuneups under his belt before he tackles ancient Max Schmeling before a $1,000,000 gate in June.

* * * *

I repeat: Schmeling knocked out Marse Louis in June 1936; Braddock had Marse Louis on the floor in the first round at Chicago; Farr almost won the decision from Louis last August. Now he is meeting one Nathan Mann, of New Haven, Conn., in a tuneup next month.

* * * *

Mann is regarded generally as the best of the younger crop of heavies, by virtue of his easy victory over Bob Pastor. Yet, this Mann—a wild-swinging fellow—is by no means a good heavyweight. His style is made to order for Louis. Louis should belt him out in six or seven rounds.

* * * *

So—what have we got? We've got a heavyweight champion, who would be massacred by any good heavy of the old days. We've got a heavy champ whom most folks figure will be kayoed again by old man Schmeling, if and when they meet. We've got a No. 1 challenger, Schmeling, who won the world championship sitting on the floor and yelling foul against Jack Sharkey many years ago—and who lost his title to that same mediocre Sharkey the next time they met.

* * * *

Judging by past standards, the No. 1 challenger is as mediocre as the champion. Then comes Braddock, a grand guy and a great fighter if you want to go "sentimental," who was resurrected from pugilism's boneyard too long ago. Next we have an egotistical palooka, Tommy Farr.

* * * *

Louis, the champion, can't take it —has no ring craft—and can't move on his feet. But he can punch. Yes sir! Marse Joe can punch. like nobody's business, if he can find a slow target that doesn't belt back. Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould, believe that Jersey James could knock out Louis—instead of merely putting him on the floor—if they ever meet again. And there are many who agree with Braddock and Gould, after last Friday's fight.

* * * *

What's the answer? Simply this: For some unknown reason America or the other countries are producing no good heavyweights. Perhaps it is an aftermath of the World War. Perhaps it's this or that. But one good heavy—who could fight like Henry Armstrong in the featherweight division, Barney Ross in the welters, or Fred Apostoli in the middle class, would bang his way to the most coveted of fighting crowns with virtually no opposition. Bring on one good heavy. Find one somewhere. He would be a gold mine on the hoof.

Closes Fast To Win; Pays $4.40 Ticket

Maecloud Takes Place, Beating Pageboy by a Length.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 24.—Mucho Gusto, winner of his two distance races at Tropical Park before finishing out of the money in the 6-furlong Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, regained his winning stride here this afternoon. The big 6-year-old, sporting the silks of Ramsey & Coppage, easily defeated ten others in the 1-mile Pompano Purse, scoring by a length and a half to pay favorite players $4.40 for $2. His time was 1:37 3-5.

Dewitt Page's filly, Maecloud, one of the outsiders, drove to the place, a length before Paul Codds Pageboy. Panther Creek was fourth.

Backers of Mucho Gusto, or "Big Gus,' as the heavily campaigned son of Marvin May became known on New England tracks last season, had to go through their share of anxious moments before the former Walter OHara horse eased their fears. Sterling Young swung the hard-hitting fellow out of the mile chute with daylight to spare over Panther Creek, but the latter drew up to the eventual winner near the far turn. Much Gusto dropped daylight behind Panther Creek and the talent thought he was through, but Jockey Young knew his horse. He had eased him back temporarily.

Drives to Victory.

Mucho Gusto came on again at the last turn and collared Panther Creek. He put that gelding away, then had no trouble. Maintaining his advantage over Maecloud in the last furlong. Pageboy closed with a rush to beat Panther Creek.

Townsend B. Martin, Long Island sportsman, unveiled a brisk 2-year-old in the 3-furlong dash for maiden fillies that inaugurated another week of the thoroughbred sport here today. Throttle Wide, a brown daughter of Flying Heels, ran in high gear from start to finish and easily took the purse by three lengths. She was a well-backed second choice at 3 to 1. Modest Queen, the favorite, came from third position with a game last furlong bid and was second by a length and a half over Huskie Queen, which tired trying to catch the winner.

Ghost Train might as well have been a ghost or a train for all the good it did the remainder of the field trying to catch him in the second race of 6½ furlongs. A $9 for $2 choice in the field of a dozen maiden 3-year-olds, the son of Bubbling Over carried his 120 pounds lightly and stole a wide advantage shortly after the break. He continued smoothly and won by three lengths. Unselfish was just as easily second over Town Car.

Under one of Henri Mora's strong finishes, Weekly Stipend, a recent winner over the turf course, made it two in a row in the 1-mile third race. The little Cuban held his mount together in admirable fashion to stave off Broad Vision's steady challenge in the last sixteenth, a head separating the pair at the line. Findon garnered third money, three lengths back. Weekly Stipend, a $9.50 for $2 hazard, made his own pace and had to withstand successive challenges from the favored Johnnie Dear, Dohoev and then Broad Vision.

Crepe Scores.

The fourth race was one of those affairs in which paddock tips were most difficult to avoid. And, strange to relate, the horses that accounted for the money were among those "good things" mentioned. Sachem, paying $18.60, scored in a photo finish with Gold Buckle, another long shot, while the well-backed Onrush was third, two lengths away. Phalasah, one of the "hottest" of the tips, faded far back after showing some early speed. Sachem made up a lot of ground to nip Gold Buckle at the wire.

With the benefit of one local race under his belt, Crepe took the track at the break and held it for the full 7 furlongs of the fifth contest, in which 3-year-olds were on display. Paul Ryan nursed his mount along in the early stages, then asked Crepe for his best in the stretch. Join Us finished well, but lost the purse by three-quarters of a length. Sketchbook made a game but futile finish for form players, finishing a length farther back. Crepe paid $10.20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SACHEM, $18.60, 10.80, $6.30; GOLD BUCKLE, $12.60, $5.90; ONRUSH, $3.00.

SACHEM gained steadily under vigorous pressure the final 3 furlongs, wore GOLD BUCKLE down through the stretch. GOLD BUCKLE, prominent factor from the start, took command when straightened into the stretch, but was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. ONRUSH, slow to find his stride, closed stoutly under punishment the last quarter mile and disposed of WOWO.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREPE, $10.20, $4.50, $3.00; JOIN US, $5.40, $3.10; SKETCHBOOK, $2.60.

CREPE, running in his best form, drew clear at once, set a swift pace while saving ground and, responding courageously under intermittent punishment through the stretch, held JOIN US safe. The latter, a forward contender throughout, made a bold effort when it came to a drive, but could not overtake the winner. SKETCHBOOK broke a trifle slowly, was far back in the early running, but came fast on the outside the last quarter mile and was gaining on the leaders at the finish.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. The Pompano. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:34. Winner, Ramsey and Coppage's b. h. (6), by Marvin May—Sweetheart. Trained by K. Ramsey. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:11 1-5, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MUCHO GUSTO, $4.40, $3.70, $3.30; MAECLOUD, $18.90, $7.80; PAGE BOY, $4.10.

MUCHO GUSTO outbroke the field, but was taken back off the pace after straightening into the backstretch. He came around PANTHER CREEK entering the stretch and drew out, but then had to be ridden out briskly to stave off MAECLOUD'S challenge. The latter, gradually improved her position while saving ground, but could not overhaul the winner. PAGE BOY, slow to find his stride, began to better his position while circling the field the last 3 furlongs and closed with a belated rush.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:05. Winner, Mrs. C. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACKTHORN, $6.40, $4.40, $3.50; SOME BOY, $19.50, $9.70; BACK FENCE, $5.80.

BLACKTHORN, on the outside and going in close attendance of the leaders from the start, drew out rapidly when straightened into the stretch, but then had to be vigorously urged to maintain his advantage. SOME BOY, a trailer in the early stages, gained steadily after leaving the backstretch and finished going fastest of all. BACK FENCE, in the thick of contention the entire trip, faltered through the stretch, yet held the others safe.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:36. Winner, Mrs. G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STONE MARTIN, $14.30, $6.30, $3.50; SUN MICA, $9.80, $5.40; TIME CLOCK, $3.50.

STONE MARTIN followed the leader under steadying restraint in the early running, drew out the final quarter mile under pressure and had a little left at the end. SUN MICA hustled into a big lead rounding the first turn, was no match for the winner, but responded gamely to punishment and outlasted TIME CLOCK in the final drive. TIME CLOCK, prominent all the way, finished with good courage and the race ought to benefit him.

Redskins Are Hurting Pro Football

By Shirley Povich.

Only 4,000 fans turned out to see their game against the Coast Allstars at Frisco and in company with the Chicago Bears, the Redskins could produce only 4,000 customers. At that rate, it's costing the Redskins money to play the games.

POVICH.

And those battles against the Bears are cheapening the pro football business. In other sports, when a title is decided it's decided, and they don't take their championship contests on tour. When the baseball season is over, it's over, and the sooner the Redskins realize that when the football season is over it's really over, they'll get out from under their losses.

Everybody but the Washington Redskins realizes, apparently, that the football season is over. The heroes of October, November and December begin to lose their luster in January and the current barnstorming tour of the champion Washington team has all the earmarks of a gigantic financial flop.

At the age of 86, Jim Mutrie, first manager of the New York Giants, died yesterday and his passing recalled to old baseball men a colorful chapter in big league history.

After winning pennants for the Giants in 1889 and 1890, Mutrie's team slipped badly and in 1892 Mutrie was released as manager. It wasn't his fault that Mutrie's team cracked. All New York were hailing the Giants as heroes after their second pennant triumph and Broadway saloonkeepers had posted huge signs behind their bars:

"No Giant can buy a drink here. If you're a Giant, the drinks are on the house."

The hard-luck guy of the major leagues is Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren, who has been shuttling back between the majors and the minors for half a dozen seasons now.

Dahlgren, a better than fair first baseman, who could hold a job on at least four major league clubs, was doing well with the Red Sox when Tom Yawkey upped and bought Jimmy Foxx from the Athletics. With Foxx on the same club, there was no place for Dahlgren and he was shipped to the minors.

Last year, at Newark, he pounded International League pitching for a sensational .340 average and was one of the top hitters in the league. That performance merited him another major league trial. But Dahlgren luck continued to dog him. The team that took him on was the New York Yankees, who happen to have as their first baseman, Mr. Lou Gehrig.

And Gehrig hasn't missed a game with the Yankees in a dozen years.

Sonja Henie's press agents had done a superb job of it and "the little reception" for the Norwegian lass in Washington a couple of weeks ago was taking on the appearance of a mob scene from Ben Hur.

Sports editors, society editors, drama editors, fashion editors, columnists, photographers and mere reporters had flocked to the hotel suite of the Henie entourage. They trampled her tootsies, plied her with questions, besieged her for autographs.

Svelt Sonja, bewildered and breathing hard, bravely submitted to the onslaught for a half hour. But still they came, new arrivals asking the same old questions, surveying her from tip to toe, and threatening to dump their cocktails into her lap.

It was hot, and stuffy, too. La Henie's head drooped, she keeled into the arms of her mother. Frantically Mme. Henie and studio representatives removed Miss Henie to the privacy of another room, announced that the interviews must be halted. Sonja had fainted, they said.

* * * *

Up in New York the other day, they asked her about that Washington interview. Was she finding the rigors of personal appearances too much?

"Oh, that Washington affair, my faint, you mean?" said Sonja. "Well, that was the best piece of acting I haff ever done."

Her New York reception by the press almost rivaled in intensity Miss Henie's greeting in Washington. A mob of reporters had plied her with the usual questions for hours. But Sonja continued to smile her answers.

And then, suddenly, there was a dead lull. Nobody could think of another question to ask. Finally a reporter elbowed his way toward Sonja from the fringe of the crowd.

"I have a question I'd like to ask," he said.

"All right," sighed Sonja, prepared to give Answer 2A form 6 in reply to Question 3B form 4.

"What is it you wish to know?"

"I'd like to know your phone number and what are you doing tonight?"

Cadets Fail To Impress In Close Tilt

Maryland Five's Zone Defense Baffling to Capital Team.

By Jack Munhall.

Warming up to its prep championship clash with Gonzaga tomorrow night, the crack St. John's five whipped stubborn Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 24 to 21, yesterday before a capacity crowd on the Cadet floor.

The Johnnies, however, were not impressive in notching their eighth victory of the season for the Maryland five, employing an effective zone defense on the narrow court, which at times had the Cadets shooting wildly from midcourt.

A change in strategy midway the third quarter proved of great help to St. John's for it halted a dangerous Bethesda rally and started a counter attack which clinched the game. Faltering in the face of the puzzling zone defense, the Cadets saw a 9-to-5 first-quarter lead dwindle to a 13-to-11 half-time margin as Phil Hayden, Bethesda forward, poured in point after point.

Then in the third quarter, St. John's began to stall at the midcourt line and make Bethesda's compact defense split up in its attempts to get the ball. This plan soon had the visitors bewildered and St. John's players drifted through to count on snowbirds.

Even with the revival of scoring form, the Johnnies were pressed throughout the last quarter to preserve its slender lead. With the score favoring them by 20-15, the Cadets faltered to allow L. Vannais and Fuller to drop in points and close the gap to 22-19, but Jim Mulvihill, scrappy St. John's guard, tossed in two successive foul shots and Bap Battiste followed with a set throw to give the winners their eventual advantage.

Battiste, hitting the hoop consistently in the first period, led St. John's with 11 points while Center Jim Giebel contributed 7.

Hayden, converting five charity throws and adding a pair of baskets, for nine markers, was outstanding for Bethesda.

Ram Singh, Hanley Mix

Will Grapple Thursday Night in Local Arena

Ram Singh, the dark-hued Hindu, and Sheriff Tom Hanley, a stranger in these here parts, have been added to Thursday night's wrestling program at Turner's Arena, Proprietor Joe Turner announced last night.

The W street mat impresario also made known the signing of Juan Olaguivel and Tommy Rae, who, like the above pair, will struggle 30 minutes or less. Signing of the three men unfamiliar in these parts is in line with Turner's policy to import new talent.

Both bouts are in support of the "world's light-heavyweight championship match" between Jesse James, who claims the title, and Gino Martinelli, who entertains titular ambitions. Everybody, however, will be working to aid the fight on infantile paralysis, for a generous slice of the gate receipts will be donated to the President's Birthday Ball fund.

Singh has been here twice before and won both engagements. He appears headed for a main bout in the near future, provided he continues to win. The Hindu is big, powerful and colorful, and enjoys a large following here. Martinelli is another newcomer to Washington, but has enough on the ball to win a few supporters.

You can take Turner's word for it the ability of Hanley, Olaguivel and Rae.

"They're all good, tough boys," he said. "And I'm only signing the best for this card. I want to put it over to help raise some money for those kids. It's a worthy cause."

So it is.

Ruark and Statland Win in Cue Tourney

Gene Ruark and Dave Statland won matches in the local 3-Cushion Billiard championship at the Royal Parlors last night.

Ruark defeated Graham Hutchison in 54 innings, 35-17; Statland won from J. Pinney in 89 innings, 35-24.

Eastern's 5 Is Favored

Meet Central Today; Tech Plays Riders.

Eastern, heading rapidly toward a clean sweep in the interhigh basketball series, plays hapless Central this afternoon in the first half of the double-header at Tech gym.

In the second game, Tech meets the improving Roosevelt five in a contest that will decide third place.

Eastern, which practically clinched the title by beating Western, the defending champion, last week, is expected to take its fifth straight victory without much trouble. Central, lacking experience and height, has been unable to win a single game, although it held Western to 19-20.

Roosevelt, with two triumphs in three starts, will be a slight favorite to halt McKinley in what promises to be a close battle. Tech has split even in four encounters and has shown plenty of potential strength.

Hydrographic Bowlers Set Navy League Pace

Hydrographic bowlers won the honors in the Navy Department League last night at the Arcadia alleys, rolling high team set of 1,688 and high game of 581. Price, of the Hydros, won team game with 154 and Falck accounted for individual set of 394.

G. P. O. set the pace in the Men's Federal League, also at Arcadia, with a 1,766 set, while G. A. O. won high team game with 630. Jerry Cowden rolled high game of 154 and Burton, of Government Printing, high set of 414.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Ezio Pinza, basso-barytone (Edwin McArthur, accompanist), and Orlando Barera, violinist (Hubert Giesen, accompanist), in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Monday morning. Program: Largo (Veracini), Tema e Variazione (Tartini), Variazione sulla "Di tanti palpiti" (Paganini), Aria (Pizzetti), Tango (Castelnuovo-Tedesco), Tarantella (Mario Pilati), "Possenti numi" from "Il Flauto Magico" (Mozart), "Alma mia" and "Ombra mai fu" (Handel), "Che fiero costume" (Legrenzi), "Pupille nere" (Buononcini), "O bellissimi capelli" (Falconieri), "Fiocca la neve" (Cimara), "L'ultima canzone" (Tosti), "Il lacerato spirito" from "Simone Boccanegra" (Verdi).

Having established themselves in the esteem of local concert goers through previous appearances, both Ezio Pinza and Orlando Barera were cordially received yesterday morning at the 102d musicale of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who was unable to be present because of illness. Her regretted absence was the more noticeable inasmuch as the violinist played her "Berceuse" for an extra number in compliment to the sponsor who introduced him to Washington in 1936.

The joint recital was almost exclusively national in character, since both the artists are natives of Italy and the program contained music by Italian composers, with the exception of the arias by Mozart and Handel, which were sung in Italian. Mr. Pinza confined himself to a familiar repertoire, while the role of innovator fell to Mr. Barera, who offered three novelties by Ildebrando Pizzetti, Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco and Mario Pilati.

Mr. Barera opened the recital conventionally enough with music by Veracini and Tartini, and on his second appearance gave a scintillant performance of Paganini's variations on "Di tanti pal-piti." One's interest was more deeply stirred, however, by his fine presentation of a charmingly lyric aria by Pizzetti, an ingenious and subtle tango by Castelnuovo-Tedesco, and a brilliant tarantella by Mario Pilati. The last piece, played for the first time in this country, is melodically attractive and rhythmically irresistible.

The refinement of Mr. Barera's playing is most admirable. While his technique is masterly, he uses it not for empty display but in delicacy of phrasing and in nicety of tonal nuance. Even in bravura passages he makes speed subservient to artistic finesse, and his musicianship is in constant control of his resources.

One of the greatest deep-voiced singers of his generation, Ezio Pinza is as well a cogent interpreter of song, thanks to his highly sensitized dramatic temperament. Personally magnetic, he charges each song with its requisite fervor, and imparts to each interpretation its adjusted emotion. His range of imaginative impersonation makes him equally effective in the solemnity of "Possenti numi" and in the tender melancholy of Cimara's "Fiocca la neve." And such is his power of convincing projection that he gives fresh life to such well-worn songs as "Ombra mai fu" and "L'ultima canzone."

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Frederick Dvonch, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand) in the Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday afternoon. Program: Quartet in A minor, Op. 29 (Franz Schubert), "Rispetti e Strombatti" (Gian Malipiero.)

For the second time this season, the Phillips Memorial Gallery was filled yesterday afternoon when the Washington Chamber Music Society presented the Pro Musica Quartet in a "candlelight" concert at the crepuscular hour from 5 to 6 o'clock. The sponsored foursome, constituted of members of the National Symphony Orchestra and headed by the young concertmaster, Frederick Dvonch, showed a more settled disposition than on the occasion of its first appearance two months ago but is not yet completely welded into unity. The playing, however, is musicianly and earnest, foreshadowing artistic growth.

Two more contrasting works could not have been chosen for performance than the early A minor quartet of Schubert, a gem of lyrical clarity, and the "Rispetti e Strombatti" of Gian Francesco Malipiero. The spontaneity of Schubert's melodies and the charm of their interweaving have a perennial appeal to the poetic imagination latent in every auditor. One may realize that the form is conventional and that the return of the themes can be anticipated, and yet one's enjoyment is no whit impaired, so persuasive is the eloquence.

Schubert stamped his individuality upon his music without knowing that he did so. Malipiero, on the contrary, is a conscious individualist devising his idiom with full awareness of its peculiarities. The theme, which with its ingenious variations runs continuously through the one-movement quartet, is highly sophisticated, and the treatment witty and mocking. This is music which comments upon itself as it goes along, a kind of soliloquy with critical remarks in parentheses.

Penn Mutual Adds a Million New Insurance

Company Has 3,250 Policies Here for Total Exceeding $14,000,000.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Thomas R. Crowley and Joseph A. Marr, general agents for Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., in Washington, yesterday announced a net increase of more than $1,000,000 of life insurance in force through their local office in 1937. Mr. Crowley explained that Washingtonians now have an insurance estate in excess of $14,000,000 in this agency of the company, represented by 3,250 policies. The average policy in force in this agency is 25 per cent higher than the company's average, it was stated.

In its six years' history, the Crowley & Marr agency has averaged a net gain in insurance in force of $1,000,000 annually, having raised the total from $8,000,000 to $14,000,000. Mr. Crowley stated that the personnel of this agency is made up entirely of young men. It is his belief that there is a greater opportunity offered to young men entering the life insurance business in 1938 than at any time in the past, because of the greatly improved educational and training facilities, such as those offered by this agency, and because of the universal acceptance of life insurance by the purchasing public.

Mr. Crowley, who is a member of the board of directors of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association entered the business in New York City immediately after his discharge from the United States Army in 1919. Subsequently, he served in the home office agency department of the Penn Mutual in Philadelphia, before coming to Washington to establish an agency here.

Mr. Marr has been engaged in the business continuously since 1916 with the exception of two years' military service in France. He is a chartered life underwriter, and one of the organizers of the Life Insurance Institute of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. He is also a professor of taxation and business insurance for the institute. Both Mr. Crowley and Mr. Marr are native Washingtonians, Washington and both are graduates of Georgetown University.

U. S. Seeks to Hold Chrysler Records

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 24 (AP).—Federal Judge F. A. Geiger received today from Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust prosecutions, a petition to impound records of the Chrysler Motors Corporation for 90 days to give the Government a chance to present evidence again against Chrysler "in this or another judicial district." Judge Geiger ordered the records kept in custody of the court pending a hearing.

A petition seeking return of the records to the Chrysler company and its financing affiliate, the Commercial Credit Co., had been made here by Joseph Quarles, Milwaukee, and T. R. Iserman, New York, Chrysler attorneys. Judge Geiger recently dismissed, before it could report indictments, a grand jury which had been investigating automobile financing methods.

Ford and General Motors records, undemanded, still are in Washington.

5 Local Banks AmongNation's 300 Largest

Chase of New York, With Over 2 Billion Deposits, Again Heads List.

By C. B. Axford,
(Editor, American Banker.)

New York, Jan. 24.—When the roll was called of the top commercial banking institutions in the United States as of December 31, 1937, by the American Banker, five Washington, D. C., banks won ranking among the first 300 in the Nation, publication of the annual largest banks edition of the American Banker revealed today.

Washington banks and their deposits as of December 31 were listed as follows:

Rank	Bank	Deposits.
68	Riggs National Bank	$95,059,922
122	Amer Security & Tr	50,377,122
200	Nat'l Metro Bank	27,597,353
236	Washington Loan&Tr	23,274,180
237	Hamilton Nat'l Bank	23,269,604

Chase National Bank of the City of New York, with total deposits of $2,069,989,500, again heads the roll call as the largest bank in the land, with the National City Bank in New York, with deposits of $1,711,552,100 ranking second, and Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, deposits $1,449,807,500, third. Ranked next in the first ten are: Bank of America National Trust & Savings system of California, deposits $1,357,378,800; Continental Illinois National, Chicago, $1,006,694,800; First National Bank, Chicago, $870,994,200; Bankers Trust Co., New York City, $852,796,800; Central Hanover Bank, New York, $831,259,100; First National, Boston, $615,939,200, and Manufacturers Trust Co., New York, $610,292,500.

Total desposits of the 10 largest banks in the United States listed above at the year end amounted to $11,376,704,600, as compared with $12,192,902,500 at the end of 1936. Total deposits of the 100 largest banks of the country at the year end were $25,567,391,100, as compared with $27,524,412,600 at the end of 1936. In the 300 largest banks deposits were $31,753,985,600, as compared with $33,929,809,700 a year ago.

The shrinkage of deposits totals of the six larger city banks, amounting to $800,000,000 in the first 10 banks, nearly $2,000,000,000 in the first 100, and nearly $2,200,000,000 by the first 300 banks, represents the effect of measures taken at Washington early in 1937 requiring Federal Reserve member banks to increase their reserve cash to double the percentage required at the beginning of 1936. This precaution against speculation caused heavy withdrawals of interbank deposits, funds placed by smaller banks with larger city institutions.

For the country as a whole, deposits in commercial banks have contracted from their all-time high figure of $51,000,000,000 at the end of 1936 to about $49,000,000,000 in the American Banker estimate. The 49,000,000,000 are still more than ample currency for the non-speculative business needs of the country, in the opinion of this 102-year-old daily banking newspaper. Even in the 1929 boom year, with its immense business and speculative volume, total bank deposits were less than $50,000,000,000.

The Market

Stocks Drift Irregularly Lower in Sharply Curtailed Trading; Wheat Higher.

New York, Jan. 24.—United States bonds improved after the sinking spell of last week, but railroad bonds were mostly lower. Stocks drilled around at fractionally lower prices for most of them most of the time. Commodities were steady. May wheat in the Chicago trading rose ¾ of a cent to 96 cents a bushel.

From the opening gong the stock market trading was dull. Turnover in the first hour was 140,000 shares, the smallest for any corresponding period since October 2 of last year, when only 110,000 shares changed hands. No tendency to wake up developed and the volume for the day was only about half a million shares, the sales volume usually associated with a midsummer session in a bad year. The standstill in the stock market is eloquent testimony to the bad case of uncertainty now suffered by investors and speculators whose ears and eyes are strained with the cacaphonous sounds and blotchy pictures of the Washington show.

Dull and Narrow.

Price movements were as narrow as the trading was dull. After an irregular opening the price level sagged slightly until late in the day, when Steel led a mild rally under the stimulus of the prediction of an increase in operating rates this week. It wasn't the sort of a day in which a speculative following could be flushed, and the rally didn't amount to much. The majority of usually active stocks moved within a half point range most of the time.

Some of the lesser known stocks were among the leaders in sales volume up to late afternoon. Comparatively active issues were Graham-Paige, Owens Illinois Glass, Yellow Truck, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Chrysler and U. S. Steel. Owens Glass, which lost more than a dozen points last week, opened 2 points lower and dragged further before finding support. North American stood out in a quiet utility group with a fractional gain. Rails worked a point lower. Acme Steel dropped 4 points on its first sale.

Slow Recovery.

Week-end statistics on trade gave no special cause for early optimism. The cold and snow in some sections of the country gave a fillip to retail trade in certain lines, but the principal industries are not yet feeling much of the expansion that ordinarily is associated with late winter. The steel industry, for example, seldom operates at so low a pace as it now is doing, for all its recent forward creeping. Operations this week will reach 32.7 per cent of capacity, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute. Last week the rate was 29.8 per cent and a year ago it was 77.9 per cent. A month ago the nadir of the depression, around 19.2 per cent was touched.

It is easy to find businessmen and other observers who think that the worst of this depression in so far as operating rates for major industries are concerned has passed, but few, on the other hand, are willing to predict an early recovery of consequence. The hardy prophets are giving themselves a good deal of space and say they look for considerably more activity by the end of the year. As has been said so often as to become wearisome in the repetition, much depends upon the policies pursued at Washington.

Sweating Blood.

In that connection the outcome of the anti-trust suits against the oil companies and the promise of further suits of the same kind are not encouraging. Co-operation is one thing when there is sincerity on both sides, but business men more than ever will be wary of putting their necks into the New Deal's noose. In the same way the public utilities, while ready to spend billions for expansion and improvement once they are given some hope of freedom of annihilation by the Government, find the atmosphere at Washington decidedly frigid. Senator Norris this morning, referring to an idea of his to have legislation to permit purchase of utility systems in their entirety by the Government when otherwise they would be starved out of existence, said: "Let the utilities' sweat for a while."

That was a happily chosen phrase. Nothing sums up the more friendly feelings of the New Deal toward business in general. However, it isn't water from the railroads, and other industries as well, that the Senator and many close to the Administration wish to see sweated out. They are after blood, and they are after it merely for the sensation of seeing the gore.

British Trade.

While British business leaders, including the heads of the Midland Bank and Barclays Bank, have been saying that there were no signs of recession in British trade, the facts do not seem to agree with the authorities. Unemployment has been increasing, and the figures recently published for December show a rise for the fourth successive month. The addition to the ranks of the unemployed in December was 166,204, compared with 108,954 in November, 51,045 in October and 29,979 in September. Such a progressive rise would give alarm to any but the optimistically inclined, even making allowance for seasonal factors. It is just the sort of situation which in this country would be passed off as "we planned it that way," or, at the worst, as a plot by obnoxious business men to discredit the New Deal. It would appear that something is just around the corner in Great Britain, notwithstanding the pump-priming effects of the huge armament expenditures.

Steel Operations Continue to Gain

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 2.9 points to 32.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 29.8 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 19.2 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 77.9 per cent. The increase forecast for the current week was the fourth consecutive upturn since the final week in December, when activity reached its lowest point of the year after 15 weeks of declining production.

Wheat Rises As Cold Wave Is Predicted

Prices Advance 1¼ Cents Maximum After Early Recession.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 24. — Climbing steadily after a slight transient setback, Chicago wheat values today scored 1¼ cents a bushel maximum gain.

Forecasts of a cold wave tonight threatening to cause domestic crop damage West and Southwest acted as a stimulus for the wheat market rise, and so too did reports of dust storms together with nearly 3,000,000 bushels decrease of the United States visible supply total. The dust storms reached from western Nebraska through western sections of Kansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

Upturns of wheat values were in the face of correct predictions that a United States Government report on wheat stocks held by interior mills, elevators and warehouses would be larger than for any of three comparable previous years.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½-⅞ cents above Saturday's finish, May 95⅛-96, July 90⅞-91, corn unchanged to ¼ higher, oats unchanged, rye unchanged to ½ up, and provisions showing 2 cents to 10 cents bulge.

Retail Advertising Dips During Week

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Retail display advertising for the week ended January 15, was 3.7 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, according to a report today by Advertising Age.

This report, based on retail lineage of newspapers in 79 major markets, shows a total of 16,864,621 lines for the week reported against 17,511,432 lines for the compared week of 1937, the loss amounting to 646,811 lines.

Vick Chemical Buys Wm. S. Merrell Co.

Cincinnati, Jan. 24 (AP).—Stockholders of the William S. Merrell Co., pharmaceutical chemists, approved late today a reorganization plan whereby the Vick Chemical Co., a Delaware corporation, would acquire all assets, in exchange for Vick stock.

Thurston Merrell, president-general manager, said the Cincinnati firm, retaining its current officers and policies, would operate as an independent subsidiary.

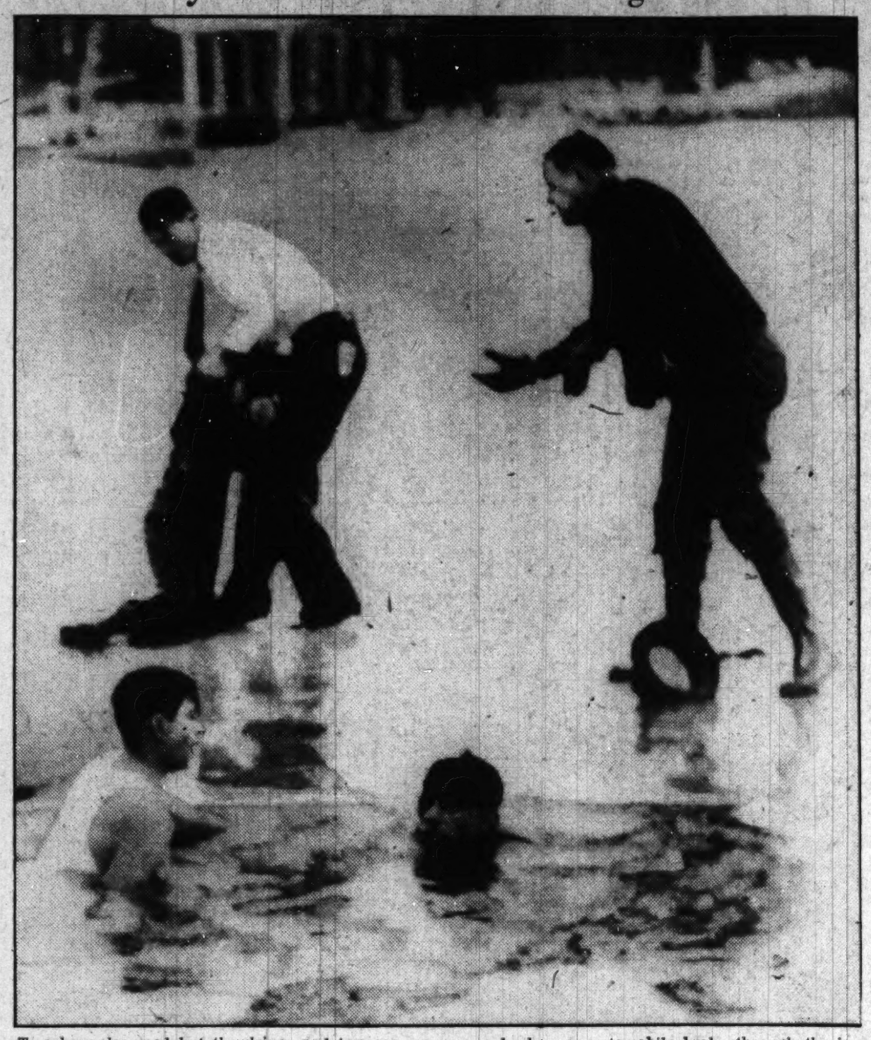
Boys Drown as Car Falls Through Ice



Two boys drowned but the driver and two men were saved when an automobile broke through the ice at Pistakee Bay near McHenry, Ill. This tragic scene shows an unidentified hero lifting the body of Albert Nelson, 9, to the ice (upper left), as Howard Peyton (lower left), father of drowned John Peyton, 6, prepares to dive for the body of his son. Floyd Armistead (right), who drove the auto, moves to aid young Nelson. (Copyright, Chicago Daily Times—from Associated Press Wirephoto.)

Harmony Lodge.

Worshipful Master Francis P. Phelps of Harmony Lodge, No. 17, has announced that tomorrow evening the Masonic play, "A Rose on the Altar," will be presented. This play was written by Junior Grand Deacon Carl H. Claudy, and will be presented by a cast from the Fellowship Club of Lafayette Lodge, No. 19.

Grand Chapter Visitations.

Grand High Priest Eugene E. Thompson and the other officers of the Grand Chapter, R. A. M., will pay their annual grand visitation to Mount Vernon Chapter, No. 3, on Monday evening, to Woodridge Chapter, No. 15, and Mount Pleasant Chapter, No. 13, on Tuesday evening, and to Washington Chapter, No. 2, on Thursday evening. This will conclude the visitations for this year.

Gompers Lodge.

Tonight Samuel Gompers Lodge, No. 45, will celebrate its thirteenth anniversary with a birthday party, which will be held at one of the downtown hotels, following the business meeting of the lodge. Worshipful Master Joseph Hurwitz appointed Junior Warden Frank Paley as chairman of the committee in charge of the evening.

Takoma Lodge.

Takoma Lodge, No. 29, will hold a Maryland night tonight. After a short business meeting, the play "A Rose on the Altar," will be presented by a cast from the Fellowship Club. Worshipful Master Herbert D. Lawson, jr., has extended invitations to 14 lodges in Maryland and to the representatives of the Grand Lodge of Maryland in that vicinity.

The first annual birthday party for the Sons and Daughters of the World War, a children's organization whose fathers were honorably discharged World War veterans, will be held at the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts avenue northwest, next Friday at 6 p. m. After the party all children present will receive presents. The party is being sponsored by Samuel Davids, organizer and promoter of the organization.

Representative Lawrence J. Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, will discuss the question "Jobs or Pensions for Veterans" at a meeting tonight at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L street northwest.

National Capital Post 127 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which is sponsoring the meeting, has invited members of veterans' organizations to attend. Connery served as a sergeant at the Mexican Border in 1916 and in France during the World War.

Bob Burns Says—

I read the other day where a well known woman writer said that the only differ'nce between the old-fashioned girl and the modern girl is the way they dress. I don't think that's fair: I believe that the modern girl is jest as sweet and shy as her old-fashioned sister, but you have'ta admit that she has advanced in her ideas.

I have a friend who has been going around with a girl out here in Hollywood for almost a year and the other night he proposed to her. He says "I love you and I want you to be my wife. Will you marry me?" The girl says "Why, this is so sudden—you've taken me by surprise and I hardly know what to say. Well, yes I will. Now wait jest a minute until I turn off the dictograph."

YOU DON'T MEAN FOUL PLAY, MY BOY!
SURE THING! THEY'VE BEEN SCRAPING OUT THE HOOFPRINTS!
SO THEY THINK I'M NOT GOOD ENOUGH TO GO OUT AND WHISTLE UP A HORSE. I'LL SHOW THEM!
AFTER SEVERAL HOURS OF SEARCHING, ROY, CHUNKY AND THE COLONEL MEET AGAIN
MEANWHILE, THE DISGRUNTLED POG REMAINS IN THE TEMPORARY CAMP—
I'LL BET MY WHISTLE GETS RESULTS BEFORE THEIRS! I THINK I HEAR SOMETHING COMING NOW!
SURE! I CAN ALMOST FEEL IT!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY— Good News By Frank Martinek

Lieut. Comdr. U. S. N. R

SOME PEOPLE FROM HERE FOUND ME DOWN THE CANYON—I HAD PASSED OUT ASTRIDE THE BURRO—BUT WHETHER I ACTUALLY SAW THAT CAVE ENTRANCE—
NO, DON... YOU COULDN'T
THERE'S NO ENTRANCE TO THE SCORPION'S CAVE EXCEPT ON TOP OF THE MESA
HOW DO YOU KNOW?
I HEARD IT OVER THE RADIO— DOZENS OF YOUR NAVY MEN HAVE BEEN EXPLORING THAT CAVE-HUNTING FOR THE SCORPION—
THEY FOUND NO OTHER ENTRANCE AND THE SCORPION WAS EVIDENTLY BURIED UNDER TONS OF ROCK BY YOUR DYNAMITE BLAST—YOU'RE RID OF HIM FOREVER!

© 1938, The Register and Tribune Syndicate
IF THE DEAN COULD SEE ME NOW, HE'D KNOW HIS SUGGESTION THAT I HIT THAT LATIN HARD IS BEING FOLLOWED
IT WOULD BE TERRIBLE IF NED FLUNKED THAT TEST AND WAS DECLARED INELIGIBLE FOR HOCKEY—PERISH THE THOUGHT!
WHAT'S THE IDEA OF THE DRUM, BUD?
I'VE ALWAYS WANTED A JOB IN AN ORCHESTRA, BUT THE ONLY DRUMMING I'VE DONE IS WITH MY FINGER TIPS
HOW THE HECK CAN I STUDY WITH YOU MAKING ALL THAT RACKET?
YOU'VE GOT SOMETHING THERE, BRANT— HOW CAN YOU?

More Letters to Mary Haworth

Last week, the subject was about how much freedom should be granted to an adolescent girl. Now, it's about the scarcity of "old-fashioned" girls.

Read Mary Haworth's Mail today on the Woman's Page and see what the boys have to say about "old-fashioned" girls.

93 Promoted To Commander In Navy Orders

Settle, Stratosphere Flier, One of List Boosted to New Rank.

The Navy's stratosphere expert, Lieut. Comdr. G. W. Settle, was one of 93 officers whose promotion to the rank of commander was approved last night by President Roosevelt upon recommendatoin of a Navy Selection Board.

Earlier in the day Mr. Roosevelt nominated Capt. Forde A. Todd, former commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, to be rear admiral and the Navy Department announced that Capt. Ferdinand L. Reichmuth has been ordered to duty as captain of the navy yard here. Army's New Uniform

Army officers must buy by fall at a cost of $100 this new blue dress uniform which will replace the old khaki uniform with standing collar, concealed buttons and no side pockets. The latter uniform was discarded some years back and in recent years officers merely kept one service suit clean for dress purposes. The new outfits have dark blue caps, sky-blue trousers with gold stripe and dark blue single-breasted coat. Coats must have no pronounced "flare," is the ruling. A black belt will be worn and accessories are mostly gold and silver. Occasions for the new uniform include ordinary wear after retreat and social use before retreat.

W.C.T.U. Hears Van Duzer on Danger of Rum

Traffic Head Cites Report of Alcohol Involved in 30 Auto Deaths.

"The public must wake to the truth that a few drinks make a dangerous driver," declared Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer before the District of Columbia Women's Christian Temperance Union last night. The occasion was the society's annual banquet, at Meridian Mansions.

Van Duzer, who recently returned to Washington after making a study of Cleveland's traffic situation, quoted Ohio authorities as saying that "alcohol was a major contributing factor in the death of more than half the persons killed in traffic."

During 1937, he said, District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald conducted tests on 48 persons, all killed in traffic accidents, to determine how many had been drinking just before their death.

"Nineteen, or 41 per cent of the pedestrians, showed positive reactions," according to Van Duzer. "Seven, or 43 per cent of the tests for passangers, showed positive reactions. Four, or 50 per cent of the drivers, were positive. In other words, 30 out of 48, or a total of 65 per cent of all tests made, were positive."

Van Duzer urged adoption of "a standard test for intoxicated drivers that will be accepted by courts and will insure conviction if guilty."

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, of Evanston, Ill., president of the National W. C. T. U., also launched an attack on the liquor traffic, declaring "the liquor question is with us not because people want to drink, but chiefly because brewers, distillers and wine makers want to sell."

She quoted statistics to show that juvenile delinquency, alcholism among women, prostitution and gambling have increased since repeal.

Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey, president of the District of Columbia Women's Christian Temperance Union, which includes nearly 30 chapters, presided at the banquet. A feature of the program was the presentation to the national president of the Central Iota Sigma, by its president, Miss Clara Blystone, as the newest adult group to be organized.

Mrs Rovilla Fry Atkinson was in charge of music for the banquet and presented Miss Gertrude Betts, who played accordion solos, and Mrs. Leo T. Tooley, contralto soloist of the National City Christian Church, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Tremearne.

There were 225 present at the affair. At the head table in addition to president and speakers, were Mrs. Erle Wilfley, first vice president; Mrs. Jennie Esmond Wright, second vice president; Mrs. Florence W. Warner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Darrel C. Crain, treasurer; Mrs. Manuel Kline, recording secretary, and Mrs. Lillie Lawrence, assistant recording secretary.

Plaque Commemorates Writing of 'Battle Hymn'

A tablet commemorating the writing of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" was dedicated yesterday at the Willard Hotel, the site of Willard's Hotel, where Julia Ward Howe wrote the song in 1861. The tablet was the gift of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic. Shown are Senator David I. Walsh, Mrs. Frances Martin Kuhns, past national president of the G. A. R. auxiliary; Samuel Prescott Hall, Miss Howe's grandson, and Margaret Hopkins Worrell, of the auxiliary.

Lewis Says CIO Will Organize Heavy Industry

'Vicious Opposition' Is Broken, Chief Tells Convention in Session Here.

Now that "vicious opposition" has been broken, said John L. Lewis yesterday, the C. I. O. will press its efforts to organize workers of mass production industries and protect its members from effects of the current business recession.

Speaking at the first convention of the Gas By-Products, Coke and Chemical Workers in the Burlington Hotel, Lewis said he was "not surprised" at the present depression—"which has forced plants to become idle and has thrown workers out of employment."

"We knew another depression would strike," he declared, "and we made the best of organization movements before the economic pendulum swung backward.

"Vicious opposition—dominating and influential financial interests who refused to permit workers to engage in collective bargaining—has been broken and we have made great strides in industrial organization."

Labor is demanding action, Lewis told the meeting, and workers intend to carry on C. I. O. organization plans.

"And," he predicted, "once this tide of economic depression has turned, workers who have profited by the experience will enroll in untold thousands."

Every American able to hold a position, Lewis continued, is entitled to a job, and workers are becoming increasingly aware of benefits of organization.

Earlier in the day, James Nelson, president of the United Mine Workers By-Product division, told the convention that Wilmington, Del., was "as much the creature of the duPont dynasty" as any West Virginia coal company town.

The convention will continue through tomorrow with additional speakers including Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas; John Brophy, executive director, C. I. O.; Jacob Baker, president, United Federal Workers of America; Marcel Scherer, organizational director, Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

Mine Blast Burns Four As 80 Workers Escape

Breckemeyer, Ill., Jan. 24 (AP).—Four men were burned, two of them seriously, in an explosion underground in the Breckemeyer Coal Co. mine today. More than 80 men had entered the mine for work shortly before the blast, but officials said all had been accounted for. The explosion was believed due to gas.

Charles E. Smith, Patent Attorney, Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Charles E. A. Smith, local patent attorney and lifelong Washington resident, will be held at Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church at 9 a. m. tomorrow, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Smith, who was 43, died in Miami Saturday. He contracted a heart ailment Christmas Day while vacationing at the Southern resort.

Born in Washington, Mr. Smith was educated at Gonzaga College, Georgetown College and Georgetown University Law School. He had been associated for the past 15 years with the patent law firm of Clarence A. O'Brien.

During the World War he served in France with Battery D, of the Sixtieth Coast Artillery, a District National Guard organization, and took part in both St. Mihiel and Argonne engagements. He was a member of Cooley-McCullough Post 22 of the American Legion.

His wife, Mrs. Jean Shine Smith, and his mother, Mrs. Frederick Smith, survive.

Rock Rolls Down Hill, Kills 2 and Hurts 4 in School

Welch, W. Va., Jan. 24.—Part of a 10-ton rock which hurtled down a mountain to tear a 12-foot hole through the Elkhorn Colored High School today, killed two students as they worked in the chemical laboratory.

The enormous boulder, split in several pieces on its 200-foot plunge, also caused the injury of a teacher and three other students. Seven in the laboratory were scratched and bruised by flying debris.

The section of rock which crashed through to the basement of the school weighed more than a ton.

After tearing through the roof it passed through the chemical laboratory floor and through the manual training room below. There was no one in the manual training room.

Tax Law Shift Urged to Retire Holding Firms

Permission to Dissolve Without Loss Sought at House Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

A New York investment adviser suggested to the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday a method of changing the tax law to stimulate dissolution of personal holding companies—a goal which President Roosevelt described recently as desirable.

Clinton Davidson, representing Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., an investment advisory organization, recommended at hearings on a tax revision program that:

For a year after enactment of a new tax law, personal holding companies be allowed to dissolve without gain, or loss, and that stockholders pay capital gains taxes on the assets, when sold, based on the length of time the assets were held.

Capital gains received by a corporation be treated like those realized by an individual.

Davidson contended that present tax laws are preventing personal holding companies from dissolving or making investments for profit.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, of the sub-committee, which framed the tax revision program, commented that Davidson's suggestions were so interesting as to merit further study.

Called back to the stand by Representative Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, Ellsworth C. Alvord, tax authority of the United States Chamber of Commerce, urged that if the principle of a tax on closely held corporations is to be retained, corporations with 50 to 100 or more stockholders be exempted from the special surtax.

Capt. Nash of Navy Medical Corps Dies

Capt. Francis Smith Nash, 84, Medical Corps, U. S. Navy, retired, died Sunday at the Naval Hospital.

A graduate of the University of Virginia, he was a member of the Greeley relief expedition of 1884. The following year he was on duty wtih the northern Alaska expedition and then served in the Smithsonian Institution.

He was on duty at the Navy Yard here from 1887 until 1890, when he resigned from the Navy.

Capt. Nash was reinstated in the naval service by act of Congress in 1905 and subsequently served in naval hospitals in Canacao, P. I.; Philadelphia, and Newport.

After duty at the Naval Academy, he returned to Washington during the World War for service as a member of the Naval Examining Board, Board of Medical Examiners and Naval Retiring Board.

Capt. Nash, who retired in 1918, is survived by his daughter, Miss Caroline R. Nash, of the Carlton Hotel.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in Fort Myer chapel, with the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips officiating. Interment will follow in Arlington Cemetery.
